Uniformed officers included departments from Flint, Saginaw, Midland and a dozen other communities. Begin and his partner were shot last week while driving a man and a woman who they arrested for a traffic violation. Ernest J. Walker, 24, is accused of the slaying. (AP Wirephoto)

Property Tax Credits For Elderly Foreseen

LANSING (AP) — Nearly 200,000 elderly Michiganders with low incomes may become eligible for increased, pre-Christmas property tax credits on this year's bills if the Legislature makes recommended changes in the present act next week.

Floor action on the bill, variously estimated to cost $13-$24 million, could be finished by next Thursday, according to House Speaker William A. Ryan, D-Detroit. It was approved

Thursday by the appropriations committee.

As recommended, the bill grants a $1,000 exemption increase to property owners, aged 65 or more and earning less than $6,000. The current exemption is for $2,500 from the state equalized valuation—the basic property taxing value—for persons making no more than $5,000.

Whether that amount will win approval by the full house and passage in the senate is unclear. Republicans and Democrats alike have expressed sympathy for the elderly exemption.

Proposed Previously

"I proposed some of these changes three years ago," said Rep. James Farnsworth, R-Plainwell, minority appropriations leader. But neither he nor any other GOP members on the House appropriations or taxation committees voted for the bill.

Ryan, who seeks to use the bill as a bargaining tool in education reform negotiations, admits compromise may be necessary.

"I'm not proposing that we go for the $3,500 exemption and the $6,000 income ceiling without negotiations on tax reform," Ryan said, "but it adds pressure for our position."

Dec. 16 Deadline

One recommendation in the bill was that claims for credits on this year's tax be accepted until 4 p.m. on Sunday, Dec. 16.

Another was to eliminate a $20,000 eligibility ceiling on the market value of an applicant's property if any of it is outside the state.

Eligibility would continue automatically for all persons who had income under $5,000 and qualified for the homestead exemption last year.

Because the proposed effective date of the change is Dec. 31, tax assessors would be told to make "administrative credits" or automatic deductions in tax bills which don't already reflect it.

Legislators added that section after noting many communities already have prepared winter tax bills for mailing on Dec. 1.

State Administration Department audit figures show property assessments increased last year by as much as 11 to 40 per cent, with an average increase of 16 per cent.

The average payment, said Lawrence J. Peatee, an accounting division supervisor, was $109 for the fiscal year that ended last June 30.

Estimates are rough since accounting years and taxing years do not correspond and rates of valuation increases vary widely.

Peatee estimated, in a letter to Ryan's executive assistant, Robert J. Crimm, that a 40-per cent exemption increase—from $2,500 to $3,500—would cost $8.4 million in lost tax revenues based on this year's figures. For next year it could cost $9 million, Peatee said.

And he predicted a $13-million extra appropriation would be needed to pay for all the increased exemptions.

West-To-East Plane Hijacked

DENVER (AP) — A Trans World Airlines jetliner, hijacked over California early today by a man with a rifle, headed for New York City after stopping in Denver to refuel and unload 39 passengers and three stewardesses.

It was believed to be the first intracountry hijacking—where the hijacker's destination was within the country where the flight originated: The TWA Boeing 707 was the 55th plane hijacked in the world this year.

TWA officials in Denver said the plane took on 77,500 pounds of fuel and speculated the hijacker may change his mind and divert the plane from New York, possibly to Cuba. Scott Werner, FBI agent-in-charge in Denver, said efforts to talk with the gunman by radio while the plane was on the ground were futile.

All of the passengers were safe. TWA said their luggage was unloaded and they were to be taken to San Francisco—their original destination—in another plane.

Dixie Schools Now Fair Game: Finch

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary Robert H. Finch is hinting he intends to use the Supreme Court's desegregation decision as a springboard for vigorous, new action against hundreds of holdout southern school districts.

"By the language of the decision itself, neither the courts nor this department should tolerate any further delays in abolishing vestiges of the dual system," the secretary of health, education and welfare said in a statement Thursday.

He pledged maximum resources "to achieve educational sound and prompt desegregation."

800 Districts Involved

Furthermore, Finch likely will send a letter to the approximately 800 districts within the next few weeks outlining his determination to bring about a quick end to still-segregated school systems, informed sources said.

Finch's lieutenants in HEW's

Office for Civil Rights are busy mapping desegregation initiatives in a new atmosphere of optimism.

One civil rights official referred to lunch Thursday as a "victory celebration."

Turnabout Ironie

The turnabout is ironic because Finch himself precipitated the court's abandonment of its previous doctrine of "all deliberate speed" by requesting a delay in the desegregation of 33 Mississippi school districts. The high court Wednesday overturned the ruling of a federal court of appeals that had accepted Finch's request for delay.

Weapons Available

HEW is armed with one of the government's two weapons against school segregation: A cutoff of federal aid to districts that refuse to dismantle dual systems. The other is court orders requested by the Justice Department.

No U.S. Funds Changed Hands, Official Says

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — A corporation of Lyndon B. Johnson associates denies any impropriety in the negotiation of multimillion-dollar grants and loans of federal land and cash shortly before he left the White House.

Frank C. Erwin Jr., president of Austin Geriatric Center Inc., described it as a nonprofit corporation "structured in such a manner that nobody can benefit financially" and said no federal money had yet changed hands.

No Federal Funds Used

Roy A. Butler, a longtime friend of Johnson and a member of the corporation's board of directors, said that "to my knowledge not a dime has been given" in federal funds for the project.

Sen. John J. Williams, R-Del., asserted in a Senate speech Thursday the corporation had figured in a "multimillion-dollar" giveaway sanctioned by the White House and centering on a gift of 26.5 acres of federal land in Austin. Williams said $8.5 million in loans and grants also was involved.

Spokesman for the Department of Health, Education and Welfare said the department on Oct. 21 had demanded return of the land.

No Tax Exempt Rating

The spokesman said the action was taken because the corporation had failed to obtain a necessary tax exempt rating for its proposed old peoples and health center for the Treasury Department.

There was no immediate Treasury Department comment. Williams said the land given to the corporation was worth $2 million—not the $642,000 declared by the federal government—and was transferred over the protest of some HEW officials who viewed the deal as a land grab.

$8 Million FHA Plan

The Delaware Republican also said the corporation received approval for $8 million in Federal Housing Administration loans and nearly $500,000 in grants from the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare while Johnson was president.

"Senator Williams has seen fit to suggest—at least by implication—that there is something improper or unethical about this worthwhile project," Erwin said in a statement Thursday.

"This is most unfortunate because the project was conceived with nothing but the highest motives and has thus far been carried on in a manner that is above reproach."

Deed Filed For 1968

A deed filed with the Travis County clerk Dec. 17, 1968—just over a month before Johnson left the White House—shows the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare conveyed most of the old National Fish Hatchery site to Austin Geriatric Center.

The HEW secretary fixed the property's fair market value at $642,000, the deed says. But the corporation received the land free in exchange for "earning a public benefit allowance of 100 per cent of said sum" by meeting conditions set by HEW.

Veterans Day 'Forced March' Plans On Move

LANSING (AP) — A Lansing man is urging a national march on Veterans Day, Nov. 11, in support of what he calls President Nixon's search for a "responsible peace."

And he says he is getting a "sensational" response to his proposal for a "controlled backfire" against antiwar demonstrations planned for the same week.

Donald Rutter, sales manager for an optical firm, put forth his idea in a letter to the editor, printed in the Lansing State Journal. He says he has received a lot of favorable comment from it. He also says he has the support of the national office of the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

Locally, Commander Marvin Ducheny of Escanaba Post 2998 VFW called on all community organizations to join the VFW in "Operation Speak Out" which is a program designed to encourage the "silent majority" to show their support on the Vietnam question during the week of Nov. 9-15, which includes Nov. 11, Veterans Day. VFW Commander - in - Chief Raymond A. Gallagher is asking all members and non-members to join in the undertaking.

Rutter says plans are under way for a "march of the silent majority" in Lansing and other cities. He said details will be announced next week.

In a telegram to Rutter, VFW public relations director John L. Smith praised the march idea and said "We have encouraged all of our 10,000 posts throughout the country to start or participate in marches of the silent majority on Nov. 11, or where not practical, on any day during the week of Nov. 9-15."

The telegram said the VFW also is asking churches to conduct special services for the occasion.

Rutter says people should "march during Veterans Week in such large numbers that nobody will ever again try to use the government-in-the-street methods in America."

He says people should "march to say we want no more marches."

In his letter to the editor, Rutter said he wanted peace, but "not a peace at any price." Rutter said the peace should be one that will "truly serve and free the South Vietnamese to pick and choose their right of determination."

Agnew Asking 'All-Out War' On Dissenters

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) — Vice President Spiro T. Agnew has called on the American people to reject the militant leaders of antiwar protest "before the witch hunting and repression that are inevitable set in."

Agnew declared Thursday it is time to question the credentials of protest organizers such as those behind the Oct. 15 Vietnam Moratorium.

"And, if in questioning, we disturb a few people, I say it is time for them to be disturbed," said the vice president, who in New Orleans last week blasted the leaders of the protest as "effete, impudent snobs."

Before 3,000 persons gathered for a $100-a-plate Republican fund-raising dinner in the state capital Agnew labeled protest organizers "merchants of hate" and "parasites of passion" and said the nation can "afford to separate them from our society—with no more regret than we should feel over discarding rotten apples from a barrel."

The statement drew cheers of approval from the audience.

The vice president did not amplify his prediction of possible repression of protest leaders.

He said, "The mature and sensitive people of this country must realize that their freedom of protest is being exploited by avowed anarchists and Communists."

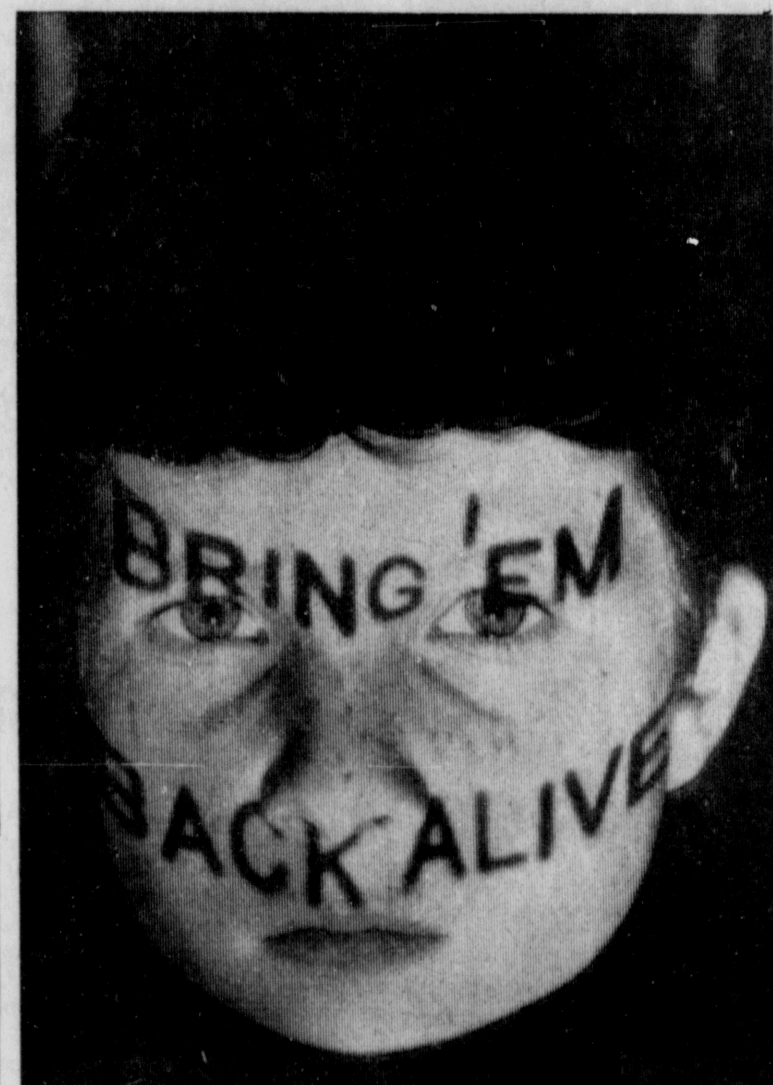

The vice president, departing from his prepared text, added: "Yes, I say Communists, because a member of one of the committees is an avowed Communist and proud of it."

While Agnew spoke, some three dozen students from colleges in the area picketed outside the sprawling, state Farm Show Arena where the dinner was held.

The demonstrators, quiet except for periodic chanting of "Peace now," carried placards saying: "Peace, it's up to you" and "End the war before it ends us."

Inside, Agnew said, "Chanting 'Peace now' is no solution if 'Peace now' is to permit a wholesale bloodbath."

Secret Kopechne Inquest Okayed

BOSTON (AP) — The Massachusetts Supreme Judicial Court has ruled that an inquest into the death of Mary Jo Kopechne must be held in secret, as requested by Sen. Edward M. Kennedy.

But in their decision Thursday the five justices declined to disqualify Judge James A. Boyle of the Edgartown District Court from presiding at the inquiry.

The ruling left Boyle free to set a new date for the inquest—originally scheduled to begin Sept. 3—and he told newsmen he would do so after studying the Supreme Court ruling.

Arguments Rejected

In addition to throwing out Kennedy's contention that Boyle should not preside, the justices rejected arguments by attorneys for the senator that the state inquest law is unconstitutional.

They upheld Boyle's directive that while lawyers for witnesses could be present while their clients were testifying, they could not cross-examine witnesses—a privilege Kennedy counsel had demanded.

The justices said the transcript of the secret inquest proceedings would be made public only if the inquest established that no criminal proceedings were called for, or after any chance of criminal prosecution had ended.

Russian Space Heroes Visit Auto Plants

DETROIT (AP) — Russian space heroes Georgy Beregovoy and Konstantine Feoktistov today view the heart of the nation's automotive industry on their goodwill tour across the United States.

Maj. Gen. Beregovoy and Feoktistov, a civilian, were slated to tour the General Motors Technical Center, attend a luncheon sponsored by Chrysler Corp. at the Detroit Athletic Club and inspect the huge Rouge plant of Ford Motor Co.

The cosmonauts flew to the Motor City Thursday aboard a U.S. Air Force jet from Arizona where they had toured the Grand Canyon. They came at the invitation of U.S. astronaut Frank Borman.

Beregovoy told newsmen, through an interpreter, that he would "like to live until the day when man will land on Mars." He said he enjoyed "the hospitality of your people" and, when asked whether he had heard about Detroit before visiting the city, said "naturally, because everywhere we see the cars everywhere."

Haynsworth: Judge Guilty Of Mistakes, Group Agrees

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Judiciary Committee majority that approve Clement F. Haynsworth's Supreme Court nomination admits the federal appeals judge made mistakes, but insists they were of no consequence.

In a report prepared for them by the Justice Department to explain their votes in sending the nomination to the floor, the 10 pro-Haynsworth committee members say the South Carolina jurist "is extraordinarily well qualified" despite opposition from labor unions, civil rights groups and others.

Point by point, the report takes up objections raised to Haynsworth's nomination to the court seat left vacant by the resignation of Justice Abe Fortas last May.

They contend Haynsworth, chief judge of the 4th U.S. Court of Appeals, has shown "evenhandedness, craftsmanship and scholarship" that would be of benefit to the highest court in the land.

The report, which has not been officially released, leaked out as opponents counted "a fairly solid" 55 votes against Haynsworth's confirmation and 45 votes in favor—including Sen. John J. Williams, R-Del., still uncommitted publicly.

The seven committee members who voted against Haynsworth have yet to draw up a report outlining objections to the nomination, but they are expected to do so within two weeks.

Perhaps the most significant point made in the majority's draft report involved Haynsworth's admission he bought $16,000 worth of stock in the Brunswick Corp. while a case involving the firm was still before his court.

"The judge's purchase was an inadvertent one," they insisted, but to avoid the ethics issue, "the stock should not have been purchased" by Haynsworth.

Scientist Celebrates Winning Nobel Prize

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — How does a scientist celebrate winning a $72,800 Nobel Prize?

If he's Murray Gell-Mann, he goes to an office party.

Gell-Mann, 40, and greying, won the 1969 Nobel Prize in physics Thursday for his work in classifying elementary particles, of which there are more than 100 in the nucleus of an atom.

Anyone expert in such an abstruse business might be expected to say "harrumph" don a white coat and duck back into his laboratory.

Professor Of Physics

Not Gell-Mann, a dapper professor of physics at California Institute of Technology.

He started the day by failing to be grumpy when awakened at 3:30 a.m. with news that he had been chosen for the award by the Royal Swedish Academy of Science.

Then he went to a news conference, where he graciously tried to explain to a largely non-scientific audience just what elementary particles are: "the building blocks of matter—in size about a hundred millionth of a millionth of an inch."

Excuses Himself

He excused himself early, saying he didn't want to upstage Dr. Harold Brown, who was almost simultaneously being inaugurated as the president of Caltech.

Then Gell-Mann sat through a speech-loaded inauguration day luncheon with his wife Margaret. Finally, almost an hour late, DR. MURRAY Gell-Mann, he showed up at a congratulatory party arranged by fellow researchers, graduate students and secretaries in a plush conference room of a new $3-million physics laboratory.

Champagne bottles began to pop. Soon there were six marks on the ceiling, left by corks from bottles of a 1959 French brut.

As the final "pop" sounded, someone cried: "There goes a quark." There was no need in that gathering to explain that quark is Gell-Mann's name for an elementary particle that he says ought to exist but which no one has yet detected.

Great fun was had by all but the party ended shortly, with Gell-Mann departing for a television interview.

Weather

ESCANABA AND VICINITY—Occasional light rain and foggy today, tonight and Saturday. Not much change in temperature. High today in the mid 40s, low tonight in upper 30s. High Saturday in the lower 40s. Sunday's outlook—rain ending and little temperature change. Sun sets today at 5:37 p. m., and rises Saturday at 7:28 a. m.

Upper Peninsula five day forecast—Saturday through Wednesday temperatures will average near normal with highs ranging from 42 to 49 degrees and lows between 28 and 34 degrees. Minor day to day temperature changes are indicated.

Precipitation will total one-half to three-quarters of an inch with rain likely Saturday, possibly continuing through Sunday in east portions. Showers possible again Tuesday.

Non-Public School Aid Forum Set Here Tuesday

Fr. Virgil C. Blum, S. J., Marquette University Professor and Doctor of Political Science, will be at Holy Name High School Gym, Tuesday at 8 p. m. for an open forum on the question of State Aid for the Education of Non-public school children.

The meeting is sponsored by the Upper Peninsula Committee to Save Non-Public Schools. Admission is free. The program will provide an opportunity for questions and answers in addition to the formal presentations.

Fr. Blum will present his considerations on the question of tax funds for the secular education of children in non-public schools.

Following the presentation, Fr. Blum and members of the U. P. Committee will be available for a forum discussion of questions raised by the public in attendance.

Members of the U. P. Committee to save non-public schools include: Carmen Deliquadri, Sam Cohodas, Harold Detman, Matt Laitala, George Hill, William Veaser, Joseph Donnelly, Russell Carrier, Roger Murray, James Wren, Harold Vanlerberghe, Richard Rinehart, Frank Hoholik, Claude Tobin, A. C. Baudek, and Frank D. Metrovich.

Fr. Blum has written and lectured extensively on the question of public aid for the secular education of non-public school children. His research and preparation in the area of State support of private schools was at the invitation of the West German Government to study their system of education. His research in Europe, 1961, included a preliminary investigation of the social impact of freedom and diversity in education in six other European countries.

Blum has published books and articles for professional journals and popular magazines. His book, "Freedom of Choice in Education" (1958) is most widely read and was followed by his book, "Freedom in Education" (1965). His published booklets, "Education: 'Freedom and Competition,' appeared in 1967 and was followed by "Catholic Education: Survival or Demise."

His articles have appeared in U. S. News and World Report, University of Chicago Law Review, Journal of Higher Education, America, and numerous other periodicals.

State Starts Sales Job On New Capitol Project

By DON HOENSCHELL Panax Staff Writer (Last Of A Series)

LANSING — Michigan's tax-shy government today started a massive public sales job for construction of a new $45 million state capitol.

Lawmakers have already appropriated $6,970,000 for its construction and Gov. William Milliken was asked if this committed the state.

"It does, it does, and I have no illusions whatever about that, and that is my intention (to build the capitol)," he said. Politicians fear retaliation at the polls for spending $45 million at a time when school financial crises are bringing demands that the new sales tax be raised to foot the state's bills.

They make these points:

- Major state programs, such as education and mental health, will not suffer, pointing to a $20 million new basic science building at Wayne State University, a $30 million medical clinic building; and five new hospitals for mentally retarded.

- The present building is condemned and dangerous to officials, state employees and to the public, and esthetically is "a bad copy of the Renaissance period, which itself copied something else."

- The $13 million cost of renovating the present capitol would be money down the drain since the result would be inadequate for the times and government would be relocated in inadequate quarters for five years — at a cost of $5 million more.

- State government is presently paying $1.2 million a year to private landlords in Lansing for space for executive departments. These functions would be housed in the new complex which would include the capitol.

- The final design — which has raised most public objections — is not yet final.

"We have three years before we have to make that one," said Engineer William C. Roege, building consultant to the Legislative Fiscal Agency. "Actually, there are five years of decisions ahead."

The concern is bipartisan.

Convinced Of Need

"We've made a very comprehensive study and have spent 3,000 hours in committee and we've been firmly convinced that in the best interests of the people of Michigan — and conscious of the economic factors involved — that a new capitol should be built at the earliest possible time," said Senator Charles O. Kollar (R-Benton Harbor).

"We could put up a warehouse for $12 to $15 a square foot with air-conditioning that would be better than we have now," said Senator Garland Lane (D-Flint). "But the people wouldn't stand for it. We'd be the laughing-stock of the world."

Lane, chairman, and Zollar, a member of the capital outlay subcommittee which revived plans for a capitol years ago, smart under public attacks that they are building it as a monument to themselves.

"If you want to build a monument to us, make it the program of building hospitals for the mentally retarded," Lane said.

Opposition Develops Pockets of bitter opposition have developed in the legislature. Rep. Thomas Brown (R-Lansing) attacks the cost and the prospect of moving the site two blocks west away from the business district.

Lane attributes this opposition to the views of Howard J. Stoddard, president of the Michigan National Bank. Lane said there is more local buying power in the huge state office buildings already built west of the site.

Michigan's legal commitment is to cluster three buildings, one for the legislature, one for the Michigan Supreme Court and the third for the governor's executive office complex. There will be two levels of parking under the entire plaza for 1,250 cars, below-surface offices for all branches of government and one reserved floor for inter-branch communications.

Seven Levels Basically, it proposes a seven-level structure. There will be vehicle access below the main plaza, which will also contain public service facilities and the state law library. The second level will have offices and related spaces for legislators and members of the other two branches. Landscaped courtyards will provide light to these areas.

The House and Senate will be on the third level. The largest of the three above-ground buildings will be for the legislature and its 148 members, service bureaus and staff.

Records show that the site is the same selected for the capitol in a 1912 master plan for the city of Lansing and repeated in 1921. The late former Sen. James Milliken, father of the present governor, took the Senate floor to urge a new capitol 25 years ago.

Land Sold Lane found yellowed documents showing that the federal government ceded to the state vast acres in downtown Lansing when Michigan became a state. "Some foolish legislators of the day sold it and now we're paying the big price for the same land they sold for peanuts," said Lane.

Two major committees are working on the plans and have for months and years. They are Lane's capital outlay group and Milliken's "Committee of 21" created by the enabling bill last year. Lane's committee has Zollar, Senators Milton Zaagman (R-Grand Rapids), and John F. Toeppe (R-Traverse City) and Reps. William R. Copeland (D-Wyandotte), Russell R. Hellman (D-Dollar Bay), James S. Fransworth (R-Plainwell) and Thomas G. Ford Sr. (R-Grand Rapids).

'Delicious' Cast Set For 'Dinner' At Holy Name

A rambunctious old man, an exasperated husband and wife, a potential writer, a willy-nilly nurse, a charming secretary, and a Hollywood star head the "menu" of characters in the comedy "The Man Who Came to Dinner," who were "cooked up" by Moss Hart and George S. Kaufman.

The play will be presented Saturday, Sunday and Monday by members of the Holy Name Drama Club.

The play describes a man, Sheridan Whiteside, played by Mark Priniski, who dines at the house of his friends Greg Gerou and Judy Wessel and their love-sick children, Colleen Cannon and Tom Chounard. While there he falls and breaks his hip.

During his convalescence he is "taken care of" by a high strung nurse, Mary Zimmerman, and recuperates in an atmosphere of ex-convicts, cockroaches, penguins, and an octopus.

On the verge of a disastrous near recovery, Mr. Whiteside is joined by his starry-eyed secretary, Mary Mott; a writer, Paul Guenette; a flashy starlet, Linda Schoenberger; and a lord, Pete Houle. He is given a dose of mixed-up radiomen, show biz people, a professor, a once-in-a-while doctor and an old maid.

Other major speaking parts are handled by Mark Williams, Mary Ryan, Rick Hemes, Steve Ammel, Mary Lancour, Mark Steede, and Kirk Gerou. The play featuring unusual and colorful stage effects and costumes is being directed by Sister Henriette and produced by Brother Christopher Kavanaugh.

Curtain time is 8 p. m. in the multi-purpose room of Holy Name. Tickets may be purchased from any drama club member.

Area Students Attend FHA Fall Workshop

POWERS — Twenty girls from the Powers-Spading High School attended the Future Homemakers of America fall workshop Saturday in Munising. The opening address was given by the Student Council president of the Munising High School, Starr Perry, Powers, regional president, introduced the regional officers.

Following roll call and reports, Sharon Wobers, State FHA president, addressed the assembly, before they convened into group sessions.

Speakers at the Generation Gap session were: the Rev. C. Jerdau, of the Episcopal Church and the Rev. Leslie Niemi of Eden Lutheran Church, both of Munising.

The topic, "Alcohol and You," was covered by Mrs. Davis Murk of Munising. The Red Rose Chapter Evaluation was by Dr. Jane Bemis of Northern Michigan University, Marquette, and Mrs. Inez Machalk of Powers spoke on the FHA Chapter Degree.

Karen Dziedzic won a special award. New officers were installed as follows: Chairman, Sheryl Davidson, Munising; Vice Chairman, Ginger Voller, Gwin; Secretary, Maurine Linder, Carney; Treasurer, Diane Kossel, Carney; Parliamentarian, Lee Champine, Munising; Pianist, Kristine Davidson, Munising.

Girls attending from the Powers-Spading High School were: Betsy Lynch, Mary Folick, Dorothy Marsick, Janice Piche, Cheryl LaBonte, Jill Hanson, Donna Kleikamp, Coleen Kell, Michelle LaBonte, Diane Kleikamp, Barbara Welch, Debbie O'Neill, Pamela Pieron, Donna LeBoeuf, Lynn O'Sullivan, Kim Stebbins, Betty Draz, Starr Perry, Patti Wheeler, Debbie Kell and Donna Kaegeka. Mrs. Inez Machalk, adviser, accompanied the girls.

Two Held For Hearing:

'Bad Trip' Brings Marijuana Charges

By CLINT DUNATHAN

Three young men who came to Escanaba recently today are held by authorities in a continuing narcotics use investigation.

Stanley W. Hojnacki, 20, and Edward Scull, 19, who came to Escanaba about Oct. 1 from Oneonta, N. Y., are charged with being in possession or control of marijuana.

John Carl Brodersen, 19, who came to Escanaba from Norway, Dickinson County, about mid-August, is to be charged with the same offense, said John R. Beauchamp, Delta County prosecuting attorney.

Hojnacki and Scull were arrested by Escanaba police on Thursday and lodged in the Delta County jail. They failed to post bond of $500 each in District Court and were given hearing today and held for trial in Circuit Court on the charge, a felony.

Conviction on the charge carries a maximum sentence of 10 years in prison, the prosecutor said.

"At this time there is no indication that other than the three men are involved here," said Beauchamp.

The incident that touched off the investigation and brought the arrests occurred at about 9 a. m. Thursday in the 700 block, Ludington St., when Brodersen, who told officers he had taken LSD, dashed through a three-eighths inch thick glass in a doorway at 714 Ludington and injured himself superficially.

Known to the Daily Press and other news media, the incident was unpublished until today to give law enforcement opportunity to investigate without disclosure of information.

At a news conference today, Prosecutor Beauchamp, Police Chief Richard Frederick and Detective John Robitaille told of the incident and the actions that followed.

"This is, I guess, the first taste of the known use of LSD in the City of Escanaba," said Beauchamp.

LSD (lysergic acid diethylamide, also called acid sugar) is a white, odorless, tasteless crystalline powder. It causes perceptual distortion, "floating" feeling, and so forth; is "Our investigation would indicate that the narcotic was not purchased locally but came from outside Michigan," Beauchamp reported.

At this time there is no indication that "any considerable" use of narcotics exists in this area," the prosecutor added.

"We are investigating any and all information given us in regard to narcotics or dangerous drugs, and we would appreciate any information or reports of incidents," Beauchamp said.

Had Planned Shop
Marijuana is also called hemp, jive, rope, grass, giggle-smoke, griffo, Indian hay, loco-weed, pot, tea, weed.

It is dark green, resembling dried parsley, and is smoked in cigarettes or pipe, may be taken orally or sniffed in powder form.

Users experience altered awareness of time and space, feelings of pleasure, self-confidence — and hazardous effects include impulsive or dangerous behavior, dangerous accidents because of time and space distortion, and poor personal care and anti-social attitude.

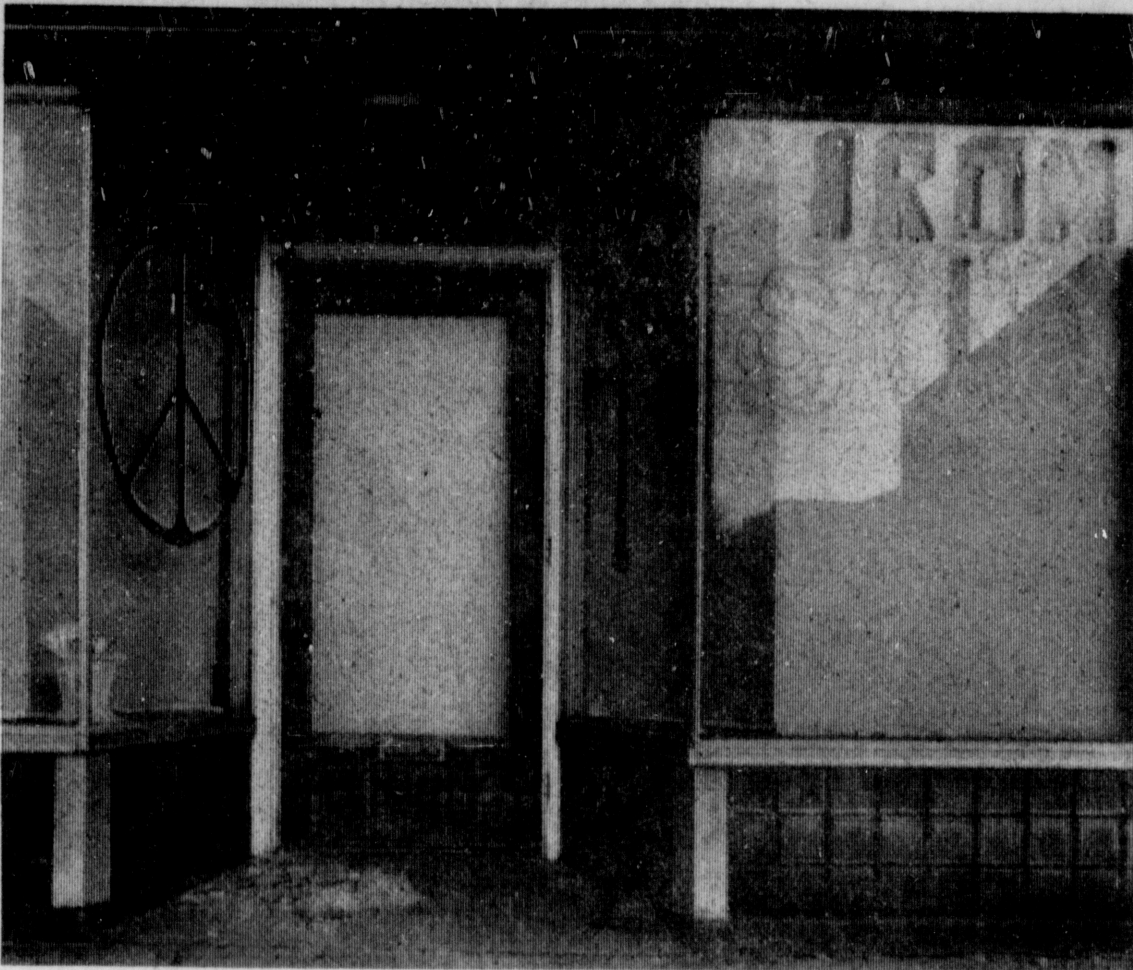

Brodersen has been residing at a motel in Gladstone. He was born in Quinnsee, graduated from Kingsford Senior High School in June, 1968, is blonde, blue-eyed, is 6 feet 1 inch tall and weighs 190 pounds.

Hojnacki and Scull are "hippie types" and officers said they were told by the two that they rented the vacant building at 714 Ludington St. with the intention of opening a "record or novelty shop." They had lived in an apartment at the rear of the store for about two weeks.

Was On LSD
Brodersen had superficial cuts on his face, arms and legs. His condition appeared satisfactory today.

"He told me that he had been using LSD and had taken it about 5 a. m. Thursday," Robitaille said.

Beauchamp reported that a search was made of the premises and a number of undetermined pills and capsules were found — "I would say a small quantity" — plus "a packet of what has been identified as marijuana, which was seized.

GLASS IN THIS DOORWAY at 714 Ludington St. was shattered when John C. Brodersen, 19, who authorities said was on "a bad trip" from LSD dashed through it and fell on the sidewalk at about 9 a. m. Thursday. Two young men living in the building, Stanley W. Hojnacki, 20, and Edward Scull, 19, today asked preliminary hearing in District Court on charges of possession or control of marijuana. Their bond was reduced to $500. The Court appointed legal counsel for them. (Daily Press Photo)

Court Vote Set For Menominee

MENOMINEE—Residents of Menominee county will vote next Tuesday on a proposal to consolidate Menominee and Dickinson counties into one probate court district.

Twelve of the 15 counties in Upper Michigan will be balloting on similar consolidation proposals.

The state of Michigan would pay 75% of the $20,000 annual salary for the judge of the two counties but the counties could supplement the salary.

Probate judges in Menominee and Dickinson, as in other counties throughout the state, are permitted to practice law on a private basis. They would no longer be permitted to maintain a practice if the counties voted to merge into one probate court district.

The Menominee county board of supervisors, Menominee County Bar association and the Democratic and Republican committees of the county are opposed to the proposal. They claim that such a system would provide fewer services for residents of the county and would not result in a tax saving.

'Elliott Letters' Program Presented

"The Elliott Letters," which tells an intriguing story of Samuel Elliott and his family from the days of his courtship and marriage to the sale of the Elliott acreage at Sac Bay on the Garden Peninsula to a member of the Evinrude family of Milwaukee after the death of the last surviving Elliott daughter, was the program at the meeting of the Escanaba Business & Professional Women's Club Tuesday evening at the Sherman Hotel.

Mrs. Clint Dunathan, president of the Delta County Historical Society, presented the slide program, in cooperation with the Publicity Committee, Alice Kvam and Mrs. Gladys Andrews, co-chairmen.

At the business meeting conducted by President Angeline Hakes, Mrs. Dorothy Chase was welcomed as a new member.

Tower Debate Running High

GRAND RAPIDS (AP) — The debate over how much it would cost to save city hall's clock tower resumes today with city commissioners and those trying to preserve the 120-foot tower about $416,000 apart.

Two of the four city commissioners who voted Monday to ask the court whether the city legally can preserve the tower while the rest of the 81-year-old sandstone building is demolished called a meeting Thursday to seek a concrete figure on the cost of saving it.

The commissioners estimated taxpayers might pay up to $600,000 if the tower remains. The Kent County Council for Historic Preservation agreed to guarantee $184,000 toward the cost of saving it.

The council also agreed to pay any damages the city might be responsible for in suits stemming from delay in wrecking the tower.

Confine Pets On Halloween Night Society Urges

Mrs. E. Alex Hawkins, president of the Delta County Humane Society, today urged owners of dogs and cats to use "extreme caution" with their pets because of the number of Halloween "Trick or Treaters" who will be on the streets tonight.

"Since your door will be opened many times to treat the children, then is a good chance that your dog might run out, jump on the children and scratch or bite them," she said.

"Not only will most dogs be excited at the repeated ringing of the door bell and the noise-makers and horns, they also will be confused by the many different types of costumes and masks with which they will be confronted. In all the excitement, a dog could easily run outdoors after the children and become lost."

Mrs. Hawkins said dogs should be confined in homes "so that they cannot escape on Halloween night" and, as at all other times, it is important that pets wear proper identification so it can be returned to its owner in event it does get out and become lost or confused.

Open Bids For Proposed School

Carl Van Remortel, chairman of the Big Bay de Noc School Board, announced today that bids were opened last night for construction of a Kindergarten through 12th grade school to be constructed near Garden Corners.

According to school officials, six general contract bids were received. The lowest bid was made by Caspian Construction Company of Caspian. Their bid was $668,730. The next lowest bid on general construction work was made by Proksch Construction Company of Iron River in the amount of $722,000.

The low bid, out of six entered, in the mechanical work went to Industrial Piping of Marquette. They bid $186,000. Hoholik Plumbing and Heating of Manistique was next lowest at $187,500.

The two lowest electrical bids went to Swan Electric of Sault Ste. Marie at $197,000, and Rapid Electric of Rapid River at $197,594.

Van Remortel said the bids will be held for 90 days. "Bonds will go on sale Nov. 12 at the Garden School," Van Remortel told the Daily Press.

Far From Perfect

The Legislature in Wisconsin approved a $1 per barrel increase in the state beer tax this week, bringing the per barrel tax to $2 per barrel.

It was the first rise in the tax in Wisconsin since the $1 a keg levy was instituted with the repeal of prohibition in 1934 and hardly seems likely to damage Wisconsin's proud reputation as the "beer capital" of the nation. (Michigan's tax is $6.30 per barrel) but before the measure passed — and despite the earmarking of the revenue to finance the money-troubled Marquette Medical School at Milwaukee — nine amendments were introduced in the Senate.

Some of those amendments wouldn't have passed the Board of Directors of the Joseph Schlitz Brewing Co. and one begins to wonder if such foolishness can go on in Madison, Wis., how much of it is possible in Lansing or Washington, D. C.

Chief antagonist of the Wisconsin beer tax bill was Sen. Ronald Parys, unidentified in news reports as to interests except as a Democrat from Milwaukee. Parys first tried to get the tax increase knocked out completely, then tried to get it cut to 50 cents — understandable in Wisconsin — but failing that he offered amendments which would have required medical school graduates at Marquette or at the University of Wisconsin to pay the state $4,000 or $10,000 after completion of their internship. For each year they remained in the state, 25 per cent of either amount would have been refunded.

Wisconsin may have a problem — like other states — in keeping its medical graduates at home, but to legislate a graduation tax seems likely only to drive students into other states in the first place.

The Milwaukee senator's colleagues apparently felt the same way. They defeated the amendments. But meanwhile the entire Senate was tied up by the delaying tactics of one individual.

It is in situations like this that the political process breaks down, not only in Wisconsin but in Michigan and other states and in Washington. While the increase in the beer tax may not be welcomed in the Beer State, the per barrel charge was generally favored in the senate (even Parys finally voted in favor of passage in a 31-0 ballot) and the increase on a per glass basis amounts to just a fraction of a penny.

Someone will have to pay the fraction, of course, but the overall benefit in keeping the Marquette Medical School solvent seems worth the sacrifice.

In this instance, the tactics of a couple of senators were overcome, but how many bills wind up on the scrap heap because of the problems involved with a few individuals? Civil Rights legislation, although it has fared better of late in Congress, often has been dumped because of the filibusters of Southern Senators. Other bills, both at state and federal levels, have died in committee because representatives with personal interests have elected not to report them out to the floor.

It is often said that Democracy isn't the ideal political system, but it beats all the rest. Instances like this should serve to emphasize to the people that it is far from perfect.

Mimics, Unlimited?

Mimicking the famous is, and always has been, a favorite mode of humor. Prince or president, magnate or movie star, anyone in the public eye can expect to see his idiosyncrasies turned into fodder for laughs.

Some are pleased perhaps on the theory that imitation is the sincerest form of flattery. But suppose the person mimicked is not pleased. Does he have a legal kick coming?

As a rule, the answer is no. Whatever anguish he feels is considered one of the penalties of fame. The law gives a kind of poetic license to the mimic to practice what it calls "a distinct variety of the histrionic art."

However, there are limits. Even the famous are entitled to be shielded against the imitator who goes too far.

For one thing, mimicry must not be used as a device for defamation of character.

"A person shall not be allowed," said a judge, "to murder another's reputation in jest."

For another thing, the mimic — even though telling no lies — must not violate the right of privacy. He must not expose the areas of the person's life that are not "fair game" for public dissection. Thus, revelation of a tycoon's personal peccadilloes, if totally unrelated to his business career, might well be an invasion of his privacy.

What if the mimic uses imitation not for humor at all, but rather to pass himself off as the real thing? In one case, an actor assumed a name and mannerisms similar to those of a famous entertainer, so as to trick audiences into coming to see him.

But a court finally halted him with an injunction, partly to protect the original entertainer, partly to protect the public. As one judge put it:

"First, a man who has a reputation for excellence is entitled to be protected in the reputation thus established; and second, the public should be protected against whomsoever places a counterfeit article on the market in the likeness of the genuine."

Peninsula Potpourri

The results of a recent appraisal of the total work force of the Copper Country was announced by Mrs. Frances Eastley, Calumet, and John Knott, Hancock, branch managers of Michigan Employment Security Commission offices. They said special teams assigned to the area for a 10-day period took a total of 759 registrations for work, which are in addition to about 450 unemployment compensation claimants primarily in seasonal unemployment and temporary layoff status.

"HOWDY, DICK, NASTY WAR YOU'VE GOT THERE"

'Ethnic Vote' Factor In New York Election

Surprises everywhere. The recent Newsweek report on the "troubled American" made much of the fact that this country was in the grip of a "new Populism."

A policeman, Charles Stenwig, has become mayor of Minneapolis by campaigning for law and order in behalf of the common man; in Boston, Louise Day Hicks almost won the City Hall by being against school busing and now, as a candidate for City Council, is more popular than ever; in Los Angeles, Mayor Sam Yorty upset the pollsters by promising to do a better job of crime elimination than his Negro opponent.

But, against the "new Populism," one must reckon with the city election in Atlanta Ga., in which Sam Massell Jr., a liberal Democrat and a Jew, garnered enough Negro votes to beat a moderate Republican. Incidentally, Atlanta had already provided itself with a Negro Vice Mayor to go with a Jewish Mayor, which means that old prejudices have taken a bad beating in one southern metropolis.

What does this portend for the rest of the country? Are the swings becoming so volatile that no predictions can be made with any certainty? Or is it simply that "Atlanta is not Georgia," or that the South is forgetting its old problems at the very time the North is inheriting them? Or, to move into still another field of conjecture, is the Atlanta vote an anti-Establishment phenomenon (Sam Massell campaigned against the rich men in "their clubs")? If so, this would make Massell's emergence Populism of a kind, even though it is not the same sort of Populism that supports Louise Hicks in Boston and Sam Yorty in Los Angeles.

In New York City, which, as they say, "is not America," the private polling swings wildly. A Republican - Conservative poll, resulting from a "representative" sampling of 2,000, shows John Marchi, the Republican - Conservative mayoral candidate, leading, with 34 per cent of the vote, but with Mario Procaccino, the Democratic candidate, just on his heels with 33 per cent, and incumbent Mayor John Lindsay, the Liberal, with 32 per cent.

The first round of the New York Daily News straw poll tells a different story; Lindsay is projected as being well ahead of Procaccino, with Marchi bringing up the rear. But the Lindsay front - running figure of 44 per cent is still not half of the total. "Populism," as represented by the "ethnics" that veer away from the Lindsay "Establishment," is still in the lead, even though Lindsay may win in the three-cornered race.

The New York "myth," as the Republican - Conservatives put it, is that "if you can't stand one, you've got to vote for the other" — meaning that New York City hatreds dictate a choice between Lindsay and Procaccino. But this "ain't necessarily so." If some of the hate feelings can be dimmed down before election day, John Marchi, as the coolest and most reasonable-sounding candidate, must benefit.

But how can the undue stress on the ethnic issues be taken out of the campaign in time to benefit Marchi? The ethnic numbers game will be played to the end. The experts will keep on talking about the Jewish "swing vote," the Irish will be subject to a daily group psychoanalysis that tries to push them into arbitrary categories bearing such labels as "Tammany hack" and "right-wing reactionary," the Puerto Ricans will be lumped with the Negroes as one great slum-bloc.

In the days when we were hoping that the teaching of high school civics and stress on the English language as a "binder" would take racial animosities out of politics, it would have been considered shameful to put ethnic considerations above everything else in appealing for votes, or even in writing about city campaigns. But those naive days are apparently gone forever.

The Jewish-Negro confrontation came into the New York campaign as a result of alleged discrimination against Jewish teachers in the fight over black-power control of the Ocean-Hill Brownsville schools. Lindsay, who incurred the wrath of the teachers at the time, has tried to make it up to them ever since.

What is lost sight of in the arguments pro and con is that Marchi, in fighting for a compromise bill in Albany that would permit local control of educational matters without robbing any group of teachers of trade union protection, might deserve support precisely because he was never one for settling problems on ethnic terms.

This column has been for Marchi because he is intelligent, not because he is the voice of any ethnic bloc. But intelligence will win in New York only if people go back to voting as individuals, which at this date may be too much to expect.

Name Of Disease Eases Most Pain

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK (AP) — What's in a name?

Well, when it comes to having a disease, the name is half the fun.

There is really no point in getting an ailment if the mere name of it alone is enough to make you half-sick.

The reason that some people stay in bed with a virus is that they are too uncommon to catch a common cold.

Fortunately, medical nomenclature is rich in important sounding afflictions to which one can point with pride. You probably have had some of these for years and never even knew it.

Let us take the field of phobias.

Afraid Of Robbers?

Are you afraid of robbers? Why, you poor thing, pull the covers over your head this minute. You've got harpaxophobia, that's what you've got.

And do you worry over whether this mythical robber, if you meet him, will stick you with a knife? Then you've also got aichmophobia, the fear of sharp-pointed objects.

Do you get tired of coping with life now and then, and feel that your wife, your boss and your mother-in-law are asking too much of you? Well, hold your head up, man, and regain your self-respect. It really isn't your fault, is it, if you have a creeping case of hypenygophobia, or the fear of responsibility?

Most pedestrians in crossing a street show signs of both levophobia and dextrophobia; that is, they are afraid of objects on the left side of their body and of objects on the right side of their body—in both cases, automobiles.

Existence Too Routine

Civilized man often feels that his job is a rut and his existence too routine. Unknowingly, he is haunted by taphephobia, the fear of being buried alive.

Right now hundreds of thousands of people in northern climes are scheming up excuses to take a winter vacation or business trip to Florida or a Caribbean port. They are more to be pitied than censured. They flee south because they have chionophobia, the fear of snow.

Contract Bridge

By B. JAY BECKER

TEST YOUR PLAY

1. You are declarer with the West hand at Four Spades.

♠ KJ974 ♠ AQ1062
♥ 5 ♥ Q7
♦ 642 ♦ KQ53
♣ AJ73 ♣ Q5

The bidding has been:
North East South West
1♥ Dble 2♥ 2♠
Pass 3♠ Pass 4♠

North leads the king of hearts and then the ace. How would you play the hand?

2. You are declarer with the West hand at Six Clubs and North leads the jack of hearts. How would you play the hand?

♠ AQ6 ♠ 742
♦ A72 ♦ KQ53
♣ AKQJ104 ♣ 72

1. It is obvious from the bidding that North has either the ace of diamonds or king of clubs (possibly both). There is no danger of going down if North has the ace of diamonds, so you must play on the assumption that South has it. South may have some such hand as:

♠ 53 ♥ 10873 ♦ AJ10 ♣ 9842

To cover this possibility, ruff the second heart, draw trumps, and lead a low club toward dummy's queen. If North does not take the king he will never get it, and if he does take it you later discard two diamonds from dummy on the A-J of clubs. Your only losers are a heart, a diamond and a club.

It would be a mistake to lead diamonds ahead of clubs. Thus, if South had the hand shown, he would take the queen of diamonds with the ace and return a diamond. The contract would then automatically go down one. You would also go down if you started the clubs from dummy in order to take a club finesse. You would eventually lose a heart, a club and two diamonds.

2. Win the ace of hearts, draw trumps, and cash the ace of diamonds. If both opponents follow suit, you can assure the contract by leading another diamond and playing low from dummy. This play guards against a 4-1 diamond division and guarantees twelve tricks.

If you were to go up with dummy's queen instead, and it turned out that the diamonds were divided 4-1, you would be forced to rely on a spade finesse. You should not subject your self to such a risk when you can nail down the contract by simply conceding a diamond. True, this will cost you 30 points more often than not, but this is a very tiny premium to pay for insuring a slam.

Ann Landers

Information Aide Hates 'Quiz' Shows

Dear Ann Landers: I am an Information Operator in a mid-west state. We need help from "the outside." Please speak for us, Ann.

People have the idea that just because we are called Information we are supposed to answer any question they take it into their heads to ask. Yesterday someone wanted to know how to spell "conscientious objector." Another woman asked if she should use 10 eggs in her angel food cake instead of 12 because her eggs were unusually large. This morning someone asked if I knew Mrs. Nixon's real name. She said, "I'm sure it isn't Pat. What is it?" When I told her I didn't know she said, "Why do you call yourself Information when you don't know anything?"

Every day people ask the temperature, the weather forecast and the correct time. One man wanted to know what city he was in. He said he was a salesman who travels a lot and sometimes he loses track of where he is.

Don't get me wrong, Ann, I love my job, but I sure wish people would understand what an Information Operator is supposed to do. And it would be nice if they said "Thank you" once in a while. Dial 113 or 411.

Dear Dial: Here's your letter and let's hope it helps. If anyone else should ask, you can tell them 10 large eggs are OK instead of 12 small ones. And Pat Nixon's name is Thelma. And thank you for writing.

Dear Ann Landers: I am 50, twice divorced, no children. I've been keeping company with a widower who has two children and five grandchildren. My income is nearly $800 a month. My friend earns about half that figure. This did not matter to me — at first. Now I'm beginning to wonder. Our wedding date has been set. I am paying for everything — including a honeymoon to Hawaii.

A few months ago he mentioned buying a wedding ring. Then he said, "Don't you have a ring from one of your former husbands — one people wouldn't recognize?" When he saw how hurt I was he said, "Oh, I didn't mean it."

I keep thinking of our phone conversations. When he calls from 40 miles away he always has to "ring off" because he doesn't want the bill to run too high. This man has over $10,000 in bonds and savings. It's not as if he was stone broke.

I was attracted to him because he is well educated, doesn't drink or smoke and he makes a fine appearance — which I could not say about either of my previous husbands. Then, of course, there is companionship, which becomes more important as time goes by. But I seem to be getting cold feet as the wedding date approaches. Will you help me decide? — Fraydita Cat

Dear Cat: The man is a cheapskate, which you know without my telling you. Now, the question: Do the compensating factors make up for this unattractive quality? Are you willing to put up with his stinginess in order to get the benefits that marriage would offer? You're the one who will have to live with the man. Only you can decide.

TEAMS COMPLIMENTED

Many cities look with fear and hesitation toward the annual inter-city football games. In my own home town such games were stopped years ago because of the bitter feelings.

Therefore I think it should be noted that last Saturday's Escanaba - Holy Name game was a fine testimony to a very positive spirit in our community. It was an excellent game of hard, clean football. Hats off to the boys and their coaches.

Also, let's not forget the bands and cheerleaders of both schools for the work they put into making the season the success it has been. Neither team ended with as many victories as they would have liked, but both were No. 1 in the U. P. in my estimation, and that includes far more than wins and losses.

LOCKED IN

ROCKFORD, Ill. (AP) — Carol Brown, 17, an employee in the cosmetics department of a local store, became ill and decided to lie down in the employees' lounge.

"Everyone kept warning me that I'd better wake up by 9 o'clock but I told them not to worry because I'm a light sleeper," she said.

When Carol awoke, the time was 9:55 p. m. The store was dark and "everything was quiet."

"I ran up and down the aisles screaming for anyone," she said. "I didn't want to spend the night in there!"

Carol called her boyfriend who, with the aid of police and an assistant manager, freed her in about 15 minutes.

FISHING FOR SALMON — These anglers are shown fishing for coho in the Whitefish River just below Bill's Creek. In the past week an estimated 1,000 have been caught in the pool which is located about two miles upstream from the U. S. 2 Highway Bridge. Most of the salmon are caught by anglers who foul-hook the fish. Coho on their way up to spawn are reluctant feeders. A few anglers, however, have been able to catch several coho using spawn bags as bait.

COHO CATCH — This lucky angler is in the process of landing a nice coho he has just hooked in the Whitefish River below Bill's Creek. The fish was one of many being taken out of the pool. This fish was foul-hooked in the tail. It did, however, put up quite a battle. Foul-hooked fish usually do. The fish being caught in the Whitefish River are averaging about 11-pounds, according to Department of Natural Resources surveys.

Miners Elated Over Bill OK

WASHINGTON (AP) — Landmark health and safety legislation for the nation's coal mines is headed for the President, praised by the men it protects as welcome news, but long overdue.

Little basic difference exists in the version of the bill passed overwhelmingly by the House this week, 389 - 4, and one approved earlier in the Senate, 73-0.

Legislative conferees could conceivably get it on President Nixon's desk for signing into law by Nov. 20—the first anniversary of the Farmington, W.Va., mine explosion which killed 78 men and triggered demands for safety reform.

The measure, also aimed at eliminating black lung disease, would require mine operators to cut coal dust levels to less than half the amount the average miner now breathes, install new safety equipment to lessen the danger from gas explosion and fire, and improve ventilation in underground shafts.

They would have six years to comply with all the regulations. "My God, it's a wonderful thing," said John "Red" Smith of Uniontown, Pa., who has been digging coal for 30 years. "Most of the fellas didn't talk about it as it worked its way through Congress, they just kept their fingers crossed."

Some miners in Pikeville, Ky., still had reservations. "The dust should be cut down to zero," one said.

Its Diet Time Again On Military Budget

WASHINGTON (AP) — For the past eight years the Pentagon has gone on periodic drives to trim fat from the defense establishment. It's diet time again.

Secretary of Defense Melvin R. Laird's announcement this week detailing new base closings, consolidations and cutbacks brings to 1,457 the number of such economy actions reported by the Pentagon since 1961.

$2.3 Billion Saved

By the Pentagon's way of bookkeeping, those moves are saving the country almost $2.3 billion.

Looked at one way, that's enough to pay for the first phase of the expensive Safeguard missile defense system.

From another viewpoint, it represents about 3 per cent of this year's $78 billion defense budget.

Or it would finance only about one month of the Vietnam war based on recent spending rates. Some Pentagon critics contend that because economies from base closings are projected into future years, the savings are to a certain extent of the paper variety.

Savings Justified

Pentagon officials argue, however, the savings are just as real as those a family might achieve by cutting back the weekly grocery bill from $50 to $35.

A chart drawn up by the Pentagon showed reported economies in money, manpower and military installations from 1961 through this week:

United States and Puerto Rico —1,229 actions, with calculated annual savings totaling $1.84 billion and elimination of 89,382 civilian and 134,463 military jobs.

Overseas—228 actions, with $459.2 million in savings and 16,778 civilian and 51,038 military jobs eliminated.

Total savings—$2.299 billion, 106,160 civilian jobs, 185,501 military slots.

Pentagon spokesmen say Laird is sensitive about the latest cutbacks, calling attention to his statement in August warning that U.S. military readiness will suffer.

More Cuts Coming

But the defense chief also cautioned Wednesday that further reductions are still to come under his congressionally inspired program to lop $3 billion from this year's defense spending plan.

Although there have been some howls of anguish from members of Congress whose districts are suffering payroll losses, Laird thus far has not encountered nearly so much opposition as one of his predecessors, Robert S. McNamara.

McNamara started it all in 1961 with a blizzard of military base shutdowns that almost blew the bottom out of the military pork barrel. He claims credit for the majority of the 1,400-plus base cutbacks listed in Pentagon press releases.

Few of this week's actions appeared to be related to the winding down of the Vietnam conflict.

Police Seize Dope Peddlers Near School

NEW YORK (AP) — A group of schoolchildren lined up outside a Bronx public school, books in hand. They also carried stolen merchandise or lunch money to trade for narcotics.

Police seized seven men this week and charged them with bartering with elementary and high school pupils trading heroin and cocaine for stolen television sets, radios, clothes and jewelry.

Evading sentries equipped with walkie-talkies, detectives slugged it out with alleged dope peddlers as hundreds of children screamed and ran for cover.

Police said they seized 75 bags of heroin, four capsules of cocaine and nearly $250 in cash—in pennies, nickels, dimes, quarters and dollar bills, the youngsters' lunch money.

Some kids sold narcotics in school and were paid in small doses for their own use, detectives said.

The roundup took place outside Public School 23, the main gathering point for daily exchange, police said. Pupils ranged in age from 8 to the mid-teens, including some from Morris High School, police said.

An investigation into a rash of thefts from local stores and apartments turned up the narcotics angle, police said.

Entire Urban Renewal Fund Release Asked

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress was urged today by Sen. Philip A. Hart, D-Mich., to appropriate the full $1.5 billion authorized for urban renewal programs.

The Nixon administration has asked for $1 billion. The House has approved $850 million.

Hart said the Senate might well appropriate the full amount if the administration increased its request.

"Unfortunately," he said, "the full $1.5 billion is less than we need. Secretary (George) Romney says he has applications in excess of $2 billion in urban renewal funds — applications that I am sure he would be happy to fill if he possibly could."

Hart said he would seek the $1.5 billion appropriation on the Senate floor regardless of the administration's request.

Hart placed in the record letters and telegrams from 1 Michigan mayors and city managers urging full funding.

U.S. Ignores Canada's Proposed Control Plan

By JOHN CUNIFF

NEW YORK (AP) — Some soul searching about wage-price-credit controls in Canada at the present time have more than ordinary significance for citizens of the United States, where the same underlying problems of inflation exist.

Nevertheless, the remarks earlier this week by Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau were largely ignored in the United States.

After explaining in the House of Commons that the government had done all it could to hold down its own expenses and expressing the fear that voluntary restraints might not work, the prime minister told newsmen: "If the private sector does not act responsibly, then we have to

Sen. Hart Sees Nomination Of Haynsworth Out

DETROIT (AP) — U.S. Sen. Philip A. Hart, D-Mich., said he is certain the Senate will reject the nomination of Judge Clement F. Haynsworth as a Supreme Court justice, the Detroit Free Press reported in its Thursday editions.

"Haynsworth will be rejected and the President will then have an opportunity to come up with a more distinguished choice—including someone from the South," Hart was quoted as saying.

The Free Press said in an article from Washington that counts taken by both opponents and supporters of Haynsworth generally agree with Hart.

They show 58 senators are likely to oppose Haynsworth, 39 will probably vote for him and three are still undecided, the Free Press said. It takes 51 votes for confirmation.

draw conclusions for the Canadian people that the private sector is not able to manage its sector of the economy as well as the government can."

If unions and business do not voluntarily accept wage and price restraints, he said, the alternative might be for the government to seek constitutional changes permitting government control of the market place.

Now these words could be interpreted as nothing more than jawboning, or the use of threats to accomplish ends unattainable by more gentle persuasion. But such an interpretation wouldn't be a wise one.

First, the remarks were apparently not made idly. Canada is in the midst of a very serious battle against inflation. It has set up a Prices and Incomes Commission, but some Canadians feel its efforts are doomed to failure.

Belief in the efficiency of voluntary restraints seems to be waning, and the call for less democratic methods of inflation control seem to be gaining power.

Hunting Ban

LANSING (AP) — A hearing has been scheduled for Nov. 21 at Romulus Township on a proposal to ban hunting in the township. Rep. Edward Mahalak, D-Romulus, said there had been a number of complaints from local citizens about hunting in the area and scheduled the hearing. He asked representatives of the State Department of Natural Resources to attend.

Draft Lottery Bill Stymied By Demo Move

WASHINGTON (AP) — Threats to open up President Nixon's draft lottery bill have caused Senate Democratic leaders to put the measure in cold storage, probably until next year.

The House passed the lottery measure 382-13 Thursday after voting 265 to 129 against an attempt to throw the measure open as a vehicle to overhaul the entire Selective Service Act.

Now some senators, not bound by House procedures, which can bar amendments, want to make a similar run at revamping the draft law.

This threat blocked efforts of leaders to reach agreements that would permit the simple reform measure to come up for action.

Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield told the Senate:

"It is my belief that the President's proposal will not be taken up in the Senate this year because it was impossible to achieve a consensus to handle only the President's suggestion by itself, and because some members of the Senate want to go far beyond the President's proposal in the consideration of the draft law."

The current draft law, which forbids a lottery, runs until June 30, 1971.

President Nixon has said that if Congress fails to act by the end of the year to permit the lottery he will switch the order of selection to draft 19-year-olds first, instead of 26-year-olds as at present. He plans to use a "moving age group" system Pentagon manpower experts say is not as fair as the lottery, under which 19-year-olds would know during their one year of eligibility their likelihood of being drafted.

Shrine To Honor Pioneer Priest

BARAGA—A group of Baraga area residents has organized the Bishop Baraga Foundation, a nonprofit corporation that plans to erect a shrine to the Upper Peninsula's pioneer missionary priest, Frederic Baraga.

The shrine is to be constructed on Red Rock bluffs overlooking Keweenaw bay along highway 41 between Baraga and L'Anse. The 35 foot bronze statue will be supported by laminated wood beams.

Referred to as the "Snow-shoe priest" and "apostle of the Indians," Baraga—who lived from 1797 to 1868—founded a mission among the Chippewa Indians near here in 1843. He was the first Catholic bishop in Upper Michigan.

After the shrine is erected, money received from sale of shrine replicas will be used to support missionaries in other countries, officials announced.

Trick-Or-Treat Trip Fatal To Grandmother, 42

MONROE (AP)—A woman was struck and killed Thursday night on a rural road north of Monroe as she returned from a trick-or-treat outing with her 23-month-old grandson.

The victim was Jewell F. Cawood, 42, who was dressed in a dark halloween costume as was her grandson Robert W. Ford. The child was thrown to the side of the road by the impact and was unhurt, police said.

Police cited the driver of the car on a driver license violation. The 28-year-old Monroe man was authorized to drive only between the hours of 6 a.m. and 6 p.m., police said. The accident happened at about 6:30 p.m.

FCC Chairman Quits Amidst Controversy

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rosel H. Hyde, accused of contempt of Congress on the same day he was being lauded for 45 years of government service, is retiring today as chairman of the Federal Communications Commission.

Dean Burch, an Arizona lawyer who was the Republican national chairman in 1964-65, was confirmed by the Senate Thursday to take over as the new FCC chairman.

The House Commerce Committee voted Thursday to seek contempt charges against Hyde for refusing to supply some agency records involving the award of a radio broadcast license.

Word of the committee's unprecedented recommendation reached Hyde while he was being honored at an FCC retirement ceremony.

Rep. Harley O. Staggers, D-W. Va., whose committee voted 20-13 to recommend that the House cite Hyde for contempt, declared:

"This committee cannot accede to the proposition that the FCC, or any other agency may dictate when and under what circumstances the Congress may have access to information relating to the conduct of public business."

However, Hyde said: "I don't think I'm in contempt. I've only undertaken to protect the integrity of the hearing process."

Whether the issue will reach the House floor—where a sharp fight could be expected—apparently won't be known until next week.

And, by that time, the committee is expected to have the records it wants to examine.

The committee wants to see FCC files in a case involving a recent six-month renewal of the license of WIFE-AM-FM in Indianapolis, Ind. The FCC approved it on a 4-3 vote.

Cornell Youth Struck By Auto

A 17-year-old Cornell youth was struck by an oncoming auto last night as he was walking north on the roadway of County Rd. 416 in Cornell Township.

Donald Charles, 18, Rte. 1, Cornell, the driver of the car, told State Police that he was passing another vehicle and did not see the man walking on the roadway.

The injured pedestrian was Terry Dickinson, 17, of Cornell. Police reported that Dickinson was wearing dark clothing and could have been hard to see. No ticket was issued.

Dickinson is currently a patient at St. Francis Hospital. He was not seriously injured, troopers reported.

AL CARTER, who stopped with his "historic" station wagon in Escanaba en route to the Mackinac Bridge, would rather have the 22-year-old station wagon buried than put on display in a museum if his plan of dumping the car off the bridge to a final resting place in the Straits of Mackinac cannot be carried out. (Daily Press Photo)

If Car Can't Go Off Bridge, Bury It, Says Chicago Owner

If his car can't be dumped off the Mackinac Bridge to a watery grave in the Straits of Mackinac, Chicagoan Al Carter would rather have the Mackinac Bridge Authority bury it than put it in a museum.

Carter and his 22-year-old station wagon which was the first nonofficial car to cross the bridge 12 years ago left Escanaba this morning for St. Ignace where he was to participate in 12th anniversary ceremonies at the bridge this afternoon.

Driving from Chicago, he said he had heard of the objections to the plan to dump the car off the bridge and the suggestion by Lawrence A. Rubin, executive secretary for the Mackinac Bridge Authority, to preserve the car for "posterity and possible placement in a museum at some future date."

"The suggestion of exhibition in a museum is a good one," Carter said in a telegram from Escanaba to Rubin this morning. "My station wagon and I are honored, but I feel that this particular station wagon, having been a tough work horse for many years, would prefer to be remembered for its past achievements instead of being exhibited as a present pile of dried up bones."

"This car is not a protected sissy antique," he emphasized. "It's not a pretty museum piece. It has had as rough a life as did our pioneers. It had guts. This car has never been garaged. It's traveled hundreds of miles over dirt and sandy roads and thousands of miles over gravel."

"In that time, a few wrinkles should be expected," Carter continued. "We're not ashamed of the wrinkles, yet, modesty leads us to believe we should be remembered for what we were, instead of what we are now."

"My parting with this car is like losing a family pet," he said sadly. "You don't put the pet in a museum. You bury him. Similarly, I feel that my station wagon should be buried."

"Since we cannot proceed with our original arrangement because of this tremendous objection, might I suggest instead a simple burial on the grounds, adjacent to the Mackinac Bridge."

"This well-traveled station wagon would then be close to other travelers who cross the Mackinac Bridge. Travelers from all states will have a friend nearby. Then if the station wagon could talk, it might say 'Let me live here, by the side of the road, and be a friend to man.'"

The project to dump the car off the bridge had been cleared by the U.S. Coast Guard and the State Dept. of Natural Resources, but Rubin earlier this week said that there had been some criticism voiced.

State Sen. Anthony Stamm (R-Kalamazoo) termed the idea "idocy." He said water pollution was involved.

Carter, a jazz drummer who drove the car over the bridge when it opened Nov. 1, 1957, planned to pay the now-reduced bridge toll today, drive the car over the bridge for the last time, then turn the keys over to the Bridge Authority.

In keeping with the occasion, he has the 1957 license plates on the car — with legal 1969 Illinois plates in the windows — and has lettered a sign on its left side "1st Car Over Mackinac Bridge — On Last Trip."

The right side of the car duly instructs the curious to "See Other Side."

The Mackinac Bridge Authority today might well say "See Other Plan."

Cigarette Ads Going Despite Dixie Backing

WASHINGTON (AP) — Anti-smoking forces in the Senate are confident cigarette commercials will be gone from radio and television by the end of next year despite some surprise opposition.

The unexpected opposition from some tobacco state senators arose Thursday as the Senate Commerce Committee met in closed session to consider proposals to end broadcast advertising of cigarettes.

The committee is working on a House-passed bill that would toughen the wording of the health warning now carried on cigarette packages.

At the same time, the House wrote in a provision barring further regulation of cigarette advertising for six years.

Since that bill passed last spring, the cigarette industry has agreed to withdraw broadcast commercials when contracts expire next September if Congress will grant the antitrust exemption so the various companies can work out a joint plan.

Sen. Frank E. Moss, D-Utah, introduced two amendments Thursday to the House bill. They would grant the exemption — a move that has Justice Department backing — but would knock out the House prohibition against further government regulation.

World's Biggest Jack-O-Lantern Set For 'Action'

PUMPKINTOWN, W. Va. (AP) — Jessie Hancock can bake enough pumpkin pies from one pumpkin to keep the entire Randolph County hamlet in pumpkin pies for a month of Halloweens.

The great gourd weighs 210 pounds and Mrs. Hancock grew it in her backyard. To thrill tonight's trick or treaters she plans to carve one of the biggest jack-o-lanterns in the world.

Only four families live in Pumpkintown now, but it used to be home to more than 200 people, many of them pumpkin farmers.

FRIENDLY RHINO

PORT ELIZABETH, South Africa (AP)—Tertia, a white rhino in a game preserve near here, polished up her horn on the front bumper of a visitor's car. Every time she rubbed, the car bounced up and down, delighting the occupants. "Tertia was so friendly we experienced no fear at all and were fascinated by her antics," said car owner Desmond White.

First National Appoints Tobin To Bank Board

John Greene, president of the First National Bank of Escanaba, announced today that Claude J. Tobin has been appointed to the bank's board of directors, and Richard Langley has been hired as an installment loan officer.

Tobin, 928 6th Ave. S., is an agent for Greyhound Bus Lines and is currently a member of the State Highway Commission.

An active member of the community, he has been a member of the Escanaba School Board, Escanaba Planning Commission and Safety Committee, American Legion, Knights of Columbus, Elks Club and the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

Tobin has also worked energetically in several area promotions such as last summer's Airport Dedication Program.

Langley has been manager of a finance company in Salisbury, Maryland for five years prior to coming to Escanaba. He is also a former real estate agent.

He is a member of the Elks Club and former president of the PTA in Salisbury. He is married to the former Patricia Gasmen of Escanab. They have two children.

Desegregation Softener Set By Republicans

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Nixon administration has promised to help ease adoption and acceptance of the Supreme Court decision ordering an immediate end to government-sponsored school desegregation.

But there were painful grumblings from the South, where the milestone ruling will have its deepest effect.

Gov. Lester Maddox of Georgia called the Mississippi schools decision a "criminal act" and appealed for a taxpayers' revolt.

George C. Wallace, former Alabama governor and the 1968 third party presidential candidate, called the decision "scandalous policy." "This court is no better than the Warren court," he said.

Atty. Gen. A. F. Summer of Mississippi said, without amplification, his state will fight to change the ruling.

And Mississippi Gov. John Bell Williams said the school children of his state had been "cruelly offered as sacrificial lambs on the altar of social experimentation."

President Nixon led the administration pledge-making with a promise the executive branch would "assist in every possible way" to overcome the "practical and human problems involved."

The President's press aide, Ronald L. Ziegler, added in a more vigorous vein: "The administration will enforce the law . . . The administration will carry out the mandate."

The government's No. 1 lawyer, Atty. Gen. John N. Mitchell, promised the Justice Department would use "every available resource" for enforcement.

The regular monthly meeting of Teamsters Local 328 will be held Saturday at 7:30 p. m. at the headquarters. The Ladies Auxiliary will meet at the same time. Members are asked to bring article to send to Vietnam for Christmas.

Escanaba police have issued traffic court notices to Thomas Hughes, Gladstone Rte. 1, speeding; Raymond H. Porter, Negaunee Rte. 1, failing to yield the right of way; and to Robert A. Busk, 3214 Lake Shore Drive, failing to exercise due care.

State Police issued traffic citations Thursday to Ramona Deiter, 1301 Superior, Gladstone, speeding; Byron Zanelle, 624 S. 21st St., Escanaba, speeding; Magnus Anderson, Rte. 3, Rapid River, driving on suspended license; and James Noel, 912 Michigan, Gladstone, no operators license.

Delta County Chapter of the Michigan Association for Retarded Children will meet at 8 p. m. Monday at the John F. Kennedy School. Teachers at the school will present the program. The group will visit the building which will be used as the adult activities center for the retarded over 21 years of age. All members and guests are welcome.

Being A Gentleman Has Its Drawbacks

By HAL BOYLE
NEW YORK (AP) — One of life's little ordeals today is trying to act like a perfect gentleman.

Gallantry was a great thing when knighthood was in flower, but it is more of a strain than most male flesh can bear in these seedy times.

The decay of male courtesy is caused by two factors: (1) There isn't room or time for old-fashioned courtesy in a crowded civilization, and (2) the changing nature of the chief object of gallantry—woman herself.

Suppose, for example, he decides to take off his hat and make a sweeping bow as a lady enters a packed office elevator. All he manages to do is to scatter dandruff over 12 people and win glares of hatred from every other man in the elevator. The lady, if she notices him at all, thinks of him as some kind of a nut.

Suppose, remembering his daily good deed as a Boy Scout, he makes it a policy to help across the street every little old lady he meets.

If a guy touches the arm of a little old lady with the intention of assisting her through the traffic, she is likely to belt him in the face with a 30-pound handbag and yell:

"Help! Police! I'm being mugged!"

That points up the second problem of male gallantry—the changing attitude toward it by women.

Women theoretically still like for men to be chivalrous and knightly. But when a man does treat her with a flourish of good manners, she either is made uneasy or misunderstands his motives.

Suppose a husband decides he will quit acting like a bum toward his wife and from now on he'll get up to his feet every time she enters or leaves the living room.

What happens? Well, of course for the first few days he has her completely mystified. She wonders what he is up to. Finally, a gleam of comprehension enters her eyes.

"You sure had me puzzled, Buster," she says. "But I finally figured it out—you're taking some new kind of yoga exercise. Shall we do it together? I need to lose some weight, too."

It never even occurs to her that the poor dolt she married is only trying to be a gentleman.

If a guy helps a lady struggle into a heavy coat, she is sure he must be some kind of a sex maniac with a fetish for fabrics.

So what profiteth it a man to be a perfect gentleman anymore, since he so seldom meets a perfect lady to be a perfect gentleman to? If he doesn't get the credit, why take the trouble?

It's far easier for a man to forget the antique graces of yesterday and to treat women as if they were men which, according to some statistics, 65 per cent of them secretly would rather be anyway.

Woman's Club Sets Charity Ball Date

The Escanaba Woman's Club brought the holiday season a bit closer this week in announcing plans for its annual Charity Ball.

Held annually during Christmas week, the Charity Ball remains one of the most festive occasions on Escanaba's social calendar. This year's event will be held Saturday, Dec. 27 at the Dells.

Mrs. Thomas Straebel and Mrs. Oliver Christianson have been named chairmen of the Charity Ball committee and they will be assisted by the Mesdames, Anthony Baudek, Charles Beggs, John Anthony, Robert Growdon, Robert Krohmer, R. G. Nelson and John Bissell.

The Charity Ball is open to the public and tickets will be available at several locations in Escanaba and Gladstone. A buffet dinner, served during the evening, is included in the ticket price.

All proceeds from the Charity Ball are used by the Philanthropic Committee of the Escanaba Woman's Club to finance several projects.

Christmas Baskets

Each year the Philanthropic committee members pack and distribute Christmas baskets of food for families in need. Last year 176 persons enjoyed Christmas dinner financed directly from Charity Ball funds.

Needy Children

Charge accounts with local merchants are made available to the school nurse, enabling her to purchase shoes or clothing for needy children. Over $100 was dispensed by the Woman's Club through these accounts in the last year. The philanthropic funds also purchased a bicycle for a junior high student affording him transportation to school.

This year, Escanaba Woman's Club members voted a large cash donation to the Brookridge Home in Marquette for emotionally disturbed children.

Events

Senior Citizens

Senior Citizens will meet at 2:30 p.m. Sunday at the Civic Center. A card social will be held in the afternoon followed by a 5:30 p.m. potluck supper and dancing. Members are to bring a dish of their choice for the supper and their own place settings.

Halloween Party

The Wells Stitch and Rip 4-H Club will have a Halloween party Saturday evening at the St. Anthony Church basement. Members are to bring donations for the party.

The regular monthly meeting of the club will be held at 7:30 p.m. Monday at the Harold Thielum home in Wells. Members are to pick up their calendars at this time.

Railroad Women

The Railroad Women's Social Club will hold their annual supper Wednesday, Nov. 5 at 6 p.m. at the Eagles Club. Reservations may be made through Monday, Nov. 3 by calling Mrs. Frank Beaudry, 786-0447. Each member attending is to bring a gift.

C&NW Ladies

The Women's Club of the Chicago & Northwestern Railway will meet Nov. 3 at the Elks' Clubrooms. The business session will be followed by lunch and cards. Hostess for the day will be Mrs. Tina Anderson and she will be assisted by Mrs. Harold Johnston, Mrs. Anna Jungles and Mrs. Anna Dugener.

Louise Roberge, Robert F. Abb Exchange Vows

Announcement is made by Mrs. William J. Roberge, 611 S. 3rd St. of the marriage of her daughter, Louise C. Roberge, to Robert F. Abb, 504 S. 8th St. on Saturday, Oct. 25.

The ceremony took place at St. John the Baptist Church in Menominee with the Rev. Stephen Mayrand officiating. Attendants were Mr. and Mrs. Austin J. Pouliot of Rte. 1 Gladstone.

The couple will be at home at 504 S. 8th St. after Nov. 3. The bride is employed as assistant cashier at the State Bank and Mr. Abb is employed by the Anderson Funeral Home.

Halloween Ghosts And Goblins Roam Tonight

By The Associated Press

Ghosts and goblins, witches and warlocks. Most pint-size, few ferocious. All will wander the land tonight. It's Halloween. It was more than 2,000 years ago that the Druids of Ireland started the celebration of Halloween, setting aside Oct. 31 to honor the god of the dead.

The traditions have changed since then—the Christians called the day All Hallow's Eve or Eve of All Saints Day and lit bonfires to ward away evil spirits. To guard their homes, they hollowed out pumpkins and put candles inside, giving birth to the jack-o-lantern.

Peace Symbol

A lighted pumpkin will have a different meaning for thousands of Americans this year. Antiwar groups have urged a "Pumpkins for Peace" campaign, suggesting that people carve the peace symbol instead of a smiling face on their pumpkins.

A group from the Women's Strike for Peace planned a noontime demonstration in New York's financial district. The demonstrators said they would dress in costume, carry a giant peace pumpkin and give away 100,000 "tricky dollars" in a Halloween "treat-in" for peace in Vietnam.

In most places, however, Halloween means "trick" treat" candy collections by costumed youngsters.

Start Early

The children of Carson City, Nev., got a head start on other youngsters by going from house to house Thursday night—by order of the Board of Supervisors.

Today is Admission Day—the 105th anniversary of statehood—and the board directed the children to celebrate early so as not to interfere with other festivities.

A more serious kind of collection marks its 20th anniversary today.

UNICEF Collection

The U.N. Children's Fund began two decades ago, and UNICEF officials are hopeful that more than 3.5 million children and adults will take part in this year's drive and boost the haul past the $3 million mark. The 20-year total of funds collected and turned over to less fortunate children is $26.6 million.

Anoka, Minn., which bills itself as the "Halloween Capital of the World," will hold a huge celebration today and Saturday, including a "March of the Little People," with grade school pupils in costume parading through the downtown area.

Pumpkin Bowl

Anoka High School will meet Cooper High School of New Hope, Minn., in the annual "Pumpkin Bowl" football game tonight and there will be another parade Saturday.

The White House holds a party this afternoon for 250 Washington schoolchildren and everyone, from members of the staff to guests, is expected to turn up in costume.

The north portico entrance of the White House was to be transformed into a huge pumpkin and children will enter through its mouth. There was to be entertainment in the East Room with President Nixon's elder daughter Tricia acting as hostess.

Frank Pokladowski Observe Anniversary

BARK RIVER—Mr. and Mrs. Frank Pokladowski observed their 25th wedding anniversary, Saturday, Oct. 25, with a Mass of Thanksgiving at St. George Church at 3 p.m. with the Rev. Thomas P. Dunleavy officiating.

A reception for 400 guests was held at the Bark River Community Hall from 5 to 8 p.m. followed by a dance. The lunch table featured a family tree sprayed in silver with pictures of Mr. and Mrs. Pokladowski and their eight children. A container for gift cards was made like a Wishing Well. Both tree and well were made by Mrs. Ellsworth Nault of Bark River.

Silver, White

The wedding cake, made by Mrs. Ben LaPlant of Escanaba, was four tiered and done in white and silver. It was served by members of the wedding party.

Mrs. Pokladowski received her guests attired in a pink crepe A-line dress with a lace empire bodice and lace sleeves. She pinned a corsage of pink roses.

The former Stasia Roschik of Wilson, the daughter of the late Joseph Roschiks, and Frank Pokladowski, son of Mrs. Sophie Pokladowski, Bark River, were married Oct. 21, 1944 at St. Francis Xavier Church in Spalding by the late Rev. Frank Seifert.

Her matron of honor, her sister, Sophie, now Mrs. Wilford Ledger of Spalding, was in the sanctuary with the couple Saturday. Other attendants were Margaret Richer, now Mrs. Louis Grzyb, Bark River, Sadie Luchay Severson of Peronville, all of whom were present for the festivities and Helen Kashinski Olfonso of Florida.

Attendants

Other attendants at the original wedding were flower girl, Pat Roschik, now Pat Boyington of Escanaba; ring bearer, John Harris, Milwaukee; best man, Stanley Pokladowski of Chicago; Louis Grzyb and Emil Skrobiak, both of Bark River. David Pokladowski was proxy for Stanley Pokladowski in Saturday's ceremony and was in the sanctuary with his parents.

Organist for the Mass was Christine Nault and assisting at the reception were: Pat Grzyb, Bark River, Mrs. Larry Charlier, Powers, Mrs. James Paizer, Menominee, Mrs. Anthony Roschik, Escanaba, Mary Pokladowski and Debbie Roschik.

Catering was by Mrs. Henry King of Escanaba. Pin on souvenirs, a silver wreath on a white bell, made by Mrs. Nault, were distributed to the guests by a daughter, Cathy Pokladowski, Chris Condon of Wilson and Donna Grzyb.

Eight Children

The Pokladowskis have eight children: Frank, Jr., Seattle, Wash., who was unable to be present; David of Chicago, Joseph, James, Mary, Cathy, John, and Janice at home. Mr. Pokladowski has seven sisters and two brothers: a sister, Mrs. Edward Stack of Chicago and his brother, Louis, were not present. Attending were: Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Gilbert and children of Chicago; Mr. and Mrs. Joe Durlak, Mrs. Anthony Petrovsky, Mrs. Orlando Silver, all of Chicago; Mr. and Mrs. Albert Sylvester, Berwyn, Ill.; Mr. and Mrs. Orval Heath, McHenry, Ill.

Mrs. Pokladowski's sisters and spouses attending were: Mr. and Mrs. James Paizer, Menominee; Mr. and Mrs. William Ledger, Spalding; Mrs. Anna Deptula, Escanaba and her brother and wife, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Roschik of Menominee.

Other relatives and friends included Miss Louise Brosseit, Des Plaines, Ill.; Mr. and Mrs. Don Kauts, Chicago; Mr. and Mrs. Russell Alswager, Union Grove, Wis.; Mrs. Frank Mintal, Green Bay.

Lakeside Church To Feature Robert Palmer

Robert W. Palmer

Robert W. Palmer, minister of the South Lansing Church of Christ in Lansing, will be special evangelistic speaker at the Lakeside Church of Christ Nov. 2 through Nov. 7.

Mr. Palmer has ministered to two of the largest Churches of Christ in the state of Michigan and has had extensive experience in the ministry and in evangelistic work.

In addition to his other duties, he has served as part-time professor and trustee at Great Lakes Bible College in Lansing, as youth camp manager and as a featured speaker at many programs, rallies and conventions.

The message at the morning worship hour this Sunday at the Lakeside Church of Christ will be brought by the evangelist and is entitled, "They Preached Unto Him, Jesus." Evangelistic Services will be held Sunday through Friday at 7:30 each evening.

The message Sunday evening will be, "A Visit to Calvary." Special music will be in charge of Mrs. Garth Rigg who will also do solo work during the services. There will be a nursery each evening.

Paul R. Stacy, minister of the Lakeside Church of Christ extends an invitation to members of the community to attend these special services.

Halloween Party At St. Anne's

The St. Anne Home and School Association will hold its annual school Halloween party in the church hall from 7 to 9 p.m. today.

Games, refreshments, prizes for costumes, surprises, will highlight the annual goblins' night affair. Admission is free.

BOOKS IN DISFAVOR

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP)—Noddy, Big Ears and other characters made famous by British children's author Enid Blyton have long been in disfavor with Transvaal Province education department librarians because of their "low literary value." Now the library is refusing to accept Blyton books submitted for rebinding and repair by schools in the province.

Television Doesn't Always Go 'By Book'

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP)—Television, like most slang and jargon, changes with time and usage. It is a combination of show business terminology, press agency, evasion and, often, wishful thinking.

Here are what some common TV words and phrases mean this season:

Star—Any actor with a regular role in a TV series—including an assortment of almost-human animals.

Superstar—Any performer whose name is also the name of his show, i.e., "The Andy Williams Show," "The Jackie Gleason Show," and, of course, "Lassie."

And also starring... Regular featured performer in a series.

Guest star—Performer of some stature in a one-shot appearance.

Special guest star—Performer of some stature whose agent has held out for better billing.

Rare television appearance—Guest appearance by a performer who has not appeared on the network for two or three months.

Hit show—Any series that most often receives a higher Nielsen rating than rival programs in the time period.

Smash hit—Any program, routinely among Nielsen's top 10.

Nielsen rating—A statistical projection of the size of television audiences made by a research company on program choices of about 1,200 homes throughout the nation, devoutly accepted by those with good ratings and scoffed at by those who have received bad news.

Second season—A January period when each network attempts to repair, by replacement and reshuffling, weak spots in its schedule.

Action series—Westerns, cops, private eyes, spies and soldiers, lots of physical stuff but, of course, no real violence.

Meaningful drama—Any program about grubby people in trouble which has a sad ending.

Public service program—A cultural or news show that attracts little sponsor interest, receives bad Nielsen ratings but—usually—good critical notices.

Controversial—Any subject which has conflicting points of view and its TV treatment reflects in a flurry of complaints, especially in Washington.

Adult entertainment—Talk shows in which "hell" and "damn" are used or which feature once-forbidden topics and off-color jokes.

Family entertainment—Kid shows in prime evening time.

Children's programming—Shows which advertise toys, candy and peanut butter.

Youthful audience—The 18-34 crowd, the most desirable audience and the big consumers.

Mature viewers—Forget them, unless you are the manufacturer of a denture cleaner or a pain reliever.

Wheelchair Vet Held In Death Of Young Wife

FORT DEVENS, Mass. (AP)—A Vietnam war veteran from Michigan confined to a wheelchair was held by military authorities today in connection with what civilian police said was the "possible strangulation" of his wife.

The victim, identified as Gloria J. Drugich, 20, was pronounced dead on arrival early Thursday at the Army hospital.

Police said Mrs. Drugich's husband, identified as Spec. 4 Roger P. Drugich, 22, was turned over to military authorities at the Army's request.

Officials said Drugich, who was recuperating from injuries sustained in Vietnam, was an outpatient at the hospital.

The Drugichs, who had no children, were from Marysville, Mich., police said.

Making Music Today Easy Says Herb Alpert

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — "This is a great time to be in music; anything goes. Why, you can take a country music outfit, combine them with the funkiest of rock combos, throw in a star and add a couple of guys hitting rocks together—and you just might come up with a hit."

The man talking was 34-year-old Herb Alpert, who knows the ways of success in today's music market. Proof: The first 13 of his Tijuana Brass albums have all collected gold records, meaning they have racked up at least a million dollars in sales.

The 14th is a safe bet to do the same. It is called "The Brass Are Coming"—Although a singular attraction, he considers the band to be plural. By no coincidence whatsoever, Herb Alpert and the Tijuana Brass are starring tonight in an NBC special, "The Brass Are Coming."

How does this special differ from the two that have gone before? "More music," he said. "The reviewers who criticized the other shows commented that there wasn't enough music. This time they won't be able to say that."

Alpert filmed the show all over—at the beach, in the streets, on the sound stage at his own studio, built by Charlie Chaplin in his heyday and now the haven of Alpert's A&M enterprises.

Alpert has compounded his success into immense holdings. How much did he earn last year?

"I don't know," he replied. "Well, I do know, but I don't want to talk about it. Too much has been made of it already. I want my son to be able to bicycle down the street without my having to worry what might happen to him."

Alpert has managed to retain much of his immense income while other big earners have failed. The reason is that he has controlled his enterprise from the beginning, publishing his own music and releasing his own records, along with those of other artists. He attributes this to his beginnings in the music business.

"I started out as a song writer,"

LANSING (AP)—The Seventh Michigan Apprenticeship Conference, sponsored by the U.S. Labor Department, will be held Nov. 4-6 in Lansing. Some 500 training experts from labor, business, industry, education and government are scheduled to attend to review the latest developments in apprenticeship and vocational education in Michigan.

Irish tradition holds that St. Patrick drove out the island's snakes in the fifth century, but scientists have no evidence that the creatures ever existed there.

er," he recalled. "Had a couple of hits, too. One of my contacts was Gogi Grant, for whom I made a demonstration record of one of my songs. A fellow at RCA liked my version, and I was signed to a singer's contract. I did some singles, but nothing happened. Two years at RCA convinced me that I wasn't cut out to be a small cog in a big organization."

Split pickers were Lois Cox and Irma Burkart.

Three Undefeated Clubs Favored In Pro Contests

NEW YORK (AP) — The Dallas Cowboys have been brooding about the last trip to Cleveland since last December and figure to take it out on the Browns in a Sunday preview of the Eastern Conference title game in December.

Los Angeles should make it seven in a row in their rematch with Atlanta although it may be tough for George Allen to get the Rams up for a team they beat 17-7 at home in September. Oakland, the other unbeaten pro club, figures to sneak past Cincinnati on the road despite the boobytraps that Paul Brown has built at Nippert Stadium.

NFL

Dallas 31, Cleveland 24 — Cowboys aching to wipe out memory of that 31-20 loss last year that knocked them out of a shot at the NFL title and a possible Super Bowl check. Offense is much better than it looked against Giants Monday although Craig Morton still has soreness in shoulder. Should be quite a collision when Dallas' front four, tops in league at smearing the passer, goes at Browns' offensive line, best protectors. A chance to size up merits of rookie of year candidates, Calvin Hill and Ron Johnson.

Minnesota 27, Chicago 10 — Vikings battered Bears 31-0 in first meeting Oct. 12 at Wrigley Field and look like the winner in tough Central Division. Bears did beat Vikings twice last year and Gale Sayers proved last Sunday he can't be overlooked. Poorest offense in league against best defense.

New York 21, Philadelphia 20 — Anything can happen in this one. Giants were supposed to live on their offense but defense has been carrying load. Eagles score points with Norm Snead pitching but they give up 30 points a game. Eagles won Aug. 30 exhibition at Princeton, N.J. 24-17. About time for Fran Tarkenton to come alive unless the Cowboys took too much out of Giants Monday night.

Washington 21, Baltimore 17 — Upset of the week and let's keep those letters coming, Baltimore, if the Colts win it. Redskins not as good as their 4-1-1 record and Colts better than 3-3. But this is for blood in a next-door rivalry and Redskins are hungrier. They haven't beaten

AFL

Houston 17, Boston 10—Patriots playing it tougher each week and are overdue to beat somebody before home folks. But Houston defense is rugged and should prevail in low-scoring game. Ode Burrell, Holte Granger and George Webster all probable despite minor injuries and Oilers may need them all.

Kansas City 27, Buffalo 17 — The Chiefs are taking people apart these days with Mike Garrett coming back to join Warren McVea and Bob Holmes. Lenny Dawson may have trouble getting back the way Mike Livingston is going. Bills in usual quarterback battle.

New York 23, Miami 17 — Another one the Jets should win but they'd better not let their guard down. The Dolphins' defense is best against the run so look for Joe Namath to start winning. Seven TD passes in seven games is not up to par for

MARBLE ATHLETIC FIELD with its new press box gives recognition to Gladstone community benefactor Webster L. Marble, pioneer industrialist and founder of world-famed Marble Arms. Besides being the home of the "Fighting Braves" the area of about six blocks provides a site for the Gladstone Armory to be constructed in 1970. It is a scenic area overlooking Little Bay de Noc and is one of the most desirable in Gladstone. (Daily Press Photo)

Key Southeast Conference Games Highlight Schedule

By The Associated Press
Take three teams that were supposed to be just mediocre but are far from it, add three equally dangerous squads, throw in a jinx or two, add an arch-rivalry ... and what do you get?

A slam-bag trio of college football games as far as the hectic Southeastern Conference race is concerned.

It's been a long time since one conference could boast an awesome lineup equally Saturday's

SEC games that match:

No. 3-ranked Tennessee, riding a five-game victory string, at defending champion Georgia, No. 11; No. 7 Florida at No. 17 Auburn and No. 8 Louisiana State against its arch-rival, rugged Mississippi, at Jackson, Miss.

LSU and Florida, both 6-0 for the season, are tied with Tennessee for first place with 2-0 marks. Ironically, all three teams were picked in pre-season polls to finish among the league's also-rans.

Tennessee, idle last week, is a one-point favorite over the Bulldogs, 2-1 and 5-1, but to win it the Vols will have to solve Georgia's stingy defense and a string of successes at home.

The Bulldogs have yielded an average of only 8.2 points per game and rank ninth in rushing defense. On top of that, they have lost only two games and tied one in 26 at home under Coach Vince Dooley. But the Vols are rolling along with a 39.6-point average, fourth best in the country.

Florida—off to an astonishing start with a sophomore-laden attack headed by quarterback John Reeves, who leads the country with 20 touchdown passes—is the nation's third best scoring outfit with a 39.7 average and ranks eighth in total offense.

Auburn, 4-2 and 1-2, has been tabbed a touchdown favorite, however, thanks to a crew of stoppers that rank second in total defense and seventh in pass offense.

In addition, Florida Coach Ray Graves has taken some dandy Gator teams to Auburn, only to have the Tigers maintain their home field jinx.

However, Graves is a little more optimistic this season. "I feel like this is probably the best team I've taken to Auburn. I know they're capable of beating anyone," he said.

Louisiana State, which has a 36.3 scoring average along with a tight defense, has lost five and tied one of its last seven meetings with Mississippi, 1-2 and 3-

Nicklaus Tied For Lead In Kaiser Open Tourney

NAPA, Calif. (AP) — Jack Nicklaus sat there saying he was playing as well as he had in two years, and talking rather casually about winning three or four tournaments in a row.

And he didn't discount the possibility of leading the money winning list. Right now he trails Frank Beard by about $77,000 with only the current Kaiser International Open Golf Tournament and three others to go.

Nicklaus, winner of the Sahara Invitational in his last start, charged in with a 66 on Thursday and shared the first round lead in the $140,000 Kaiser with Lou Graham and Jack Nicklaus.

"If I win here," said Nicklaus, who has won about $94,000 this year, "that would put me only about $1,000 behind Gary Player," who is third on the list with about $123,000. And Player isn't going to play any more this year.

"If I win maybe three in a row, well, I'd be right up there. I don't know whether I'll play Danny Thomas," he said, referring to the final tournament of the year. "But if I'm in a position to improve my standing on the list, maybe take No. 1, I'll sure try to."

"It all just depends."

Nicklaus now ranks seventh on the money list. He has not finished lower than third since 3, and to improve on that the Tigers will have to stop sensational junior quarterback Archie Manning.

"If you let him operate at his will, you better hold on," said Coach Charles McClendon.

Other games Saturday find top-ranked Ohio State at Northwestern, No. 2 Texas at Southern Methodist, Texas A&M at No. 4 Arkansas, Boston College at No. 5 Penn State, No. 6 Southwestern California at California, Washington at No. 9 UCLA and Navy at No. 10 Notre Dame.

Also, it's No. 12 Kansas State at No. 14 Missouri, No. 13 Purdue at Illinois, No. 15 Wyoming at Arizona State in a night game, No. 16 Stanford at Oregon State, No. 18 Colorado at Nebraska, No. 19 Air Force at Army and Wisconsin at No. 20 Michigan.

Ohio State isn't expected to have much trouble running its victory string to 20 straight—and six for the season—against Northwestern, stung 45-20 by Purdue last week.

But Buckeye Coach Woody Hayes will have a wary eye to the past. In 1958, Hayes' undefeated and top-ranked club was upset by the Wildcats 21-0 in the sixth game of the season.

Texas and Arkansas also are expected to maintain their co-leadership in the Southwest Conference. The Longhorns will have a busy afternoon containing SMU passing ace Chuck Hixon, but the Mustangs will have an even tougher time with Texas' bruising running backs.

Arkansas has scored 191 points while giving up only 27, and Texas A&M shouldn't pose much of a threat to eighth mark.

Penn State, 6-0, is an overwhelming favorite over Boston College, 2-2, but Southern California, 6-0, could be in for a battle to maintain its Pacific-8 lead against stubborn California, 4-2. Second-place UCLA, 6-0-1, is a solid favorite over Washington 0-6.

Kansas State, 5-1, which proved its early season success wasn't a fluke by trouncing Oklahoma 59-21 last week, faces a struggle in preserving its Big Eight lead against Missouri, still smarting from last Saturday's 31-24 upset loss to Colorado.

The Tigers are tied with Colorado and Nebraska for second, all with 2-1 records, behind K-State, 3-0.

Purdue is a big favorite to crush winless Illinois and stay in the thick of the Big Ten race. The Boilermakers, 2-1 in the league, share second with Indiana, Michigan, Northwestern and Wisconsin in the fight for the runner-up spot behind Ohio State—and a trip to the Rose Bowl since the Buckeyes are barred from a repeat visit to the New Year's Day classic.

Black Hawk Star Seeks Settlement

TORONTO (AP) — Bobby Hull returned Thursday from a trip through Western Canada and said he will go to Chicago this weekend in an effort to resolve a contract dispute with the Black Hawks.

The high-scoring National Hockey League left winger said in a telephone interview from his farm at Picton, Ont., that his Chicago lawyer has also returned from a trip to Europe.

"I'll be in Chicago this weekend to listen to his advice," Hull said.

Hull claims the club has not fulfilled its commitments with regard to fringe benefits promised when he signed a four-year contract at the beginning of last season.

Great Lakes Conference Honors Six Area Players

Great Lakes Conference champion Gladstone placed four players on the All-Conference team selected yesterday at the conference's annual fall meeting at Munising.

Gladstone gridders named to the offensive unit were Lynn Apelgren, end; Tom Pfoth-hauer, guard; and Cliff Young, quarterback, while Vern VanDrese was honored on the defensive unit as a linebacker.

Another of the Escanaba area teams, Manistique, placed two players on the offensive team, tackle Frank Hentschell and running back Keith Aldrich.

In addition to those receiving first team honors, Gary Goodman, John Skellenger, Gary Young, Mike Quinn, Bob Young and Bart Stupak of Gladstone and Al Goodreau, Kendall Neeson, Wayne Vallier, Jeff Fountain and John Adams of Manistique were given honorable mention.

Apelgren was the Braves' top receiver this past season and Young was the team's leading scorer with 55 points in eight games. Pfothhauer was a mainstay of the Braves' offensive line with his fine blocking and VanDrese led the team in the tackling department with 77.

Aldrich was Manistique's top rusher and scorer this season, scoring 24 of the team's total of 44, and Hentschell turned in some outstanding performances in the line and was also the Emeralds' kicker.

Bucks Bombard Piston Cagers

By The Associated Press
Shut out a National Basketball Association team—impossible. But the Milwaukee Bucks did it to the Detroit Pistons for 7½ minutes, and it was long enough.

Trailing 30-25 Thursday night, the Bucks outscored the Pistons 20-0 en route to a 50-24 halftime lead and a 102-81 victory.

Low Alcindor, who fouled out for the third time in eight games, led Milwaukee with 23 points and 19 rebounds and Flynn Robinson contributed 25 points.

Detroit, which scored only 10 points in the second quarter, was led by Dave Bing with 21 points.

In the only other NBA games, New York topped San Diego 123-110 and Phoenix shaded Cincinnati 106-104.

Walt Frazier pumped in 28 of his pro career high 43 points in the second half, to lead New York from a 59-53 halftime deficit to its victory over San Diego.

Willis Reed added 22 points for New York, and Elvin Hayes topped San Diego with 25.

Rookie Neal Walk's lay-up with two seconds to play gave Phoenix its triumph over Cincinnati as the Suns overcame a 12-point deficit.

Gail Goodrich topped Phoenix with 27 points and Tom Van Arsdale led the Royals with 23.

Pacers Record Narrow Victory

By The Associated Press
One second and 18 feet. That was the problem facing Indiana's Bob Netolicky, and he came up with the right answer.

Netolicky had the ball 18 feet from the basket with one second left in overtime Thursday night. So, with time to do nothing else, he scored and the Pacers beat the Washington Capitols 123-121.

In the only other ABA game, Los Angeles beat New Orleans 117-110, also in overtime.

Washington overcame an 18-point deficit to take a nine-point lead, but Indiana fought back to tie it at 109-all at the end of regulation time.

Roger Brown scored 34 points, John Barnhill 27, Mel Daniels 25 and Netolicky 18 for Indiana. Warren Armstrong led Washington with 28.

Los Angeles outscored New Orleans 15-8 in the overtime period in handing the Bucs their third straight setback at home. Bill McGill's hook shot with nine seconds left in regulation time enabled the Stars to tie the game 102-all.

Bob Warlick topped Los Angeles with 27 points and Jackie Moreland was high for New Orleans with 26.

Tricky Greens
COLORADO SPRINGS (AP) —Collegiate golfers found the Broadmoor greens so tricky in the NCAA Championships this year that only three of the nearly 300 players broke par 70 during the 72-hole competition.

PROBATE JUDGE John S. Faketty presents Mrs. J. Joseph Herbert with a plaque on behalf of the Michigan Children's Aid Society honoring her "for distinguished service to the children of the Upper Peninsula." Mrs. Herbert is a trustee of the organization.

Mrs. Herbert Cited As Children's Aide

Mrs. J. Joseph Herbert of Manistique was honored for "distinguished service to the children of the Upper Peninsula" by the Children's Aid and Family Service board of directors.

Probate Judge John S. Faketty accepted a plaque for Mrs. Herbert at a dinner in Marquette on Saturday, Oct. 25 commemorating the organization's 50th anniversary. Vern C. Dahlquist of Marquette, executive director of the society, made the presentation.

Mrs. Herbert, who has served on the board of trustees "too many years to remember the date" when she was first named to that body, began working for the Aid as a volunteer in 1917 while a student at the University of Michigan.

She was a field worker for foster and adoption homes in 1918-19 and brought two Children's Aid girls with her when she and her husband moved to Manistique in 1919. The girls were later placed in permanent homes. In 1925 she and her late husband, an attorney, adopted two of their three children from the Detroit branch of the Aid.

"It has been a rewarding experience, watching the work of caring for the children of the U.P. being developed by capable, trained workers," she said.

She pointed out the excellent job being done by Probate Judge John Faketty whose office has placed 86 children for adoption since 1952. "I think we are extremely fortunate to have his personal interest and attention in these matters," she said.

Open City Program Blessing To Hippies

DETROIT (AP) — The telephone number is 831-2770 and it rings a bell of help in what is becoming known as Detroit's "Salvation Army" of the hippie generation.

The phone is in Open City, a dingy suite of three rooms in mid-town Detroit where volunteers operate an answering service 24 hours a day to help drug addicts suffering overdoses, alcoholics, runaways, unwed mothers, young people thinking of suicide and, sometimes, parents concerned about their children.

Started For Freaks

"Open City was started for freaks, for people who can't relate to the establishment," said John Martin, chief coordinator of the group's activities.

Open City operates a tiny, one-room health center with the assistance of three volunteer doctors. Martin said that of the patients who wander in, 50 per cent are treated for venereal disease and the remainder for a wide variety of other afflictions.

Open City is financed through contributions and whatever income it receives through a store called The Blood Bank, where inner-city residents sell their wares such as pottery, hand-sewn garments, sandals, jewelry, and glassware. The store keeps 20 per cent of the profits.

Search For Homes, Jobs

A food co-op plus a search for homes for the homeless and jobs for the jobless are other Open City facets.

Many of the calls to Open City during its nine months of operation have involved use of drugs.

Many of the Open City volunteers have known at close hand the horrors of drug addiction or have experimented with LSD and other drugs.

Co-Co, a girl volunteer wearing blue jeans and a wrinkled cotton shirt, motioned toward another volunteer, John Chestnut, an unemployed former ambulance driver and hospital orderly.

"John is terrific with suicides," she said. "He can rap (talk) and rap with them. We can always holler for John when we get a suicide call."

Suicide Averted

"A few nights ago a guy called. He was tripping out on acid," said Chestnut. "He had taken five hits (doses of LSD).

"He finally told me that he tried to commit suicide a few times and had been in a mental hospital for awhile," Chestnut said. "Then he told me he had a loaded pistol by the phone. He said he was afraid but that he still wanted to use it because he didn't think he was worth anything."

"I told him," Chestnut said, "he could come down to Open City and answer phones and help people just like I was trying to help him."

The volunteers said the potential suicide came down to Open City and worked for several nights, talking a few times to potential suicides. A volunteer named Diane said "He said he felt a lot better. We haven't seen him for a few days but he's still in the area."

Briefly Told

Traffic citations were issued Wednesday to Charles F. Walsh, Chateau Guay Center, Que. and Earl Ansell, Garden, both for speeding; Nancy Dalgard, Fayette, no registration proof, and Leitha Sawyer, Messick, no operator's license and no insurance proof.

Carl Erickson Jr. of Marquette reported to state police that in swerving to avoid striking a deer, he lost control of his car, ran off the roadway and hit a tree. The accident happened at 1:10 Thursday morning on M-94. The car was towed by wrecker. No personal injuries and no tickets were reported.

Cutback In Latin Role Appears Near

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon is expected to announce tonight a cutback in the United States' traditional role as leader in Latin American economic development, sources say.

The President's long-awaited Latin American policy speech generally will reflect, sources say, a growing belief the United States can play no more than a minor role in pursuing the social, economic and political objectives established by the Alliance for Progress.

However, Nixon will say the United States will continue its interest in Latin American affairs, but more as a partner, the sources said.

Nixon's speech to the Inter-American Press Association meeting here will be broadcast live by satellite to 10 Latin American nations but will not be seen on U.S. television.

Nixon is said to believe that much of the anti-Americanism manifested on New York Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller's series of trips to the region last summer is attributable, in part, to the gap between past U.S. rhetoric and action.

Another change in the Nixon policy, according to informed officials, will be treatment of all governments essentially as equals. Under the Alliance, foreign assistance frequently was withheld from regimes which overthrew the previous government.

The consensus is that use of aid as a means of encouraging political democracy has not worked. Well over half of all Latin Americans now live under military dictatorship.

The rebirth of military rule in Latin America is considered to be the result, in part, of the failure of civilian governments to deliver on Alliance promises.

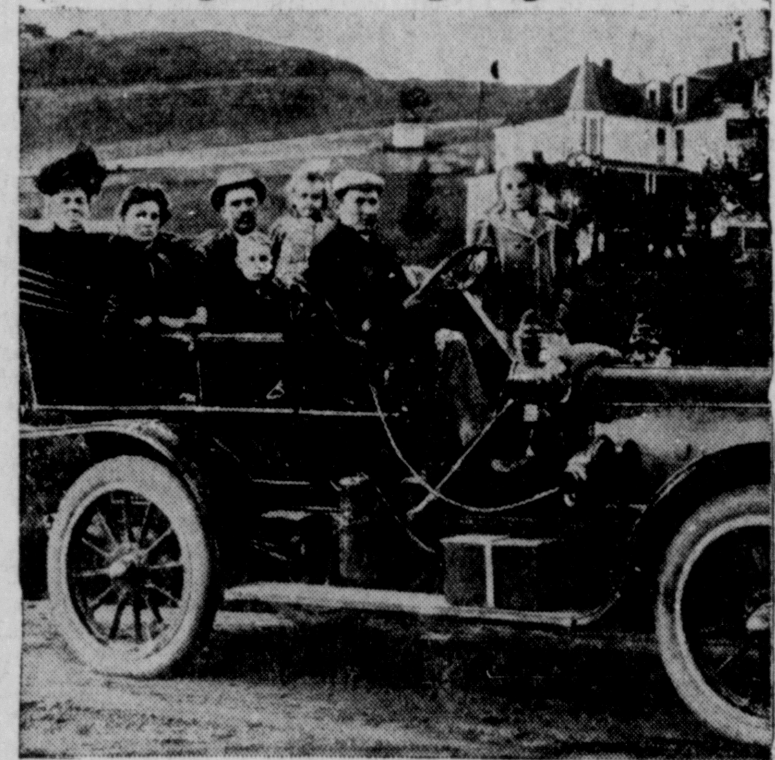

Assessing the situation a year ago in a campaign statement, Nixon said the Alliance was foundering. Sources close to the administration say he believes it is essential that the United States reduce its promises to a level commensurate with its capabilities.

These sources say Nixon may propose modest steps toward liberalization of trade and aid policies, long a sore point with Latin Americans who complain the United States encourages industrial diversification while erecting barriers which severely limit the import of Latin products.

Births

SMITH — Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Smith, 619 Michigan Ave., are the parents of a daughter born Wednesday, Oct. 29, at the Schoolcraft Memorial Hospital. The infant weighed five pounds. Mrs. Smith is the former Christine Schnurer.

Why Can't things be the way they used to be?

You know. When the Negro "knew his place," When students stayed in the classroom. When poverty was kept off page one. Ah, the good old days. But who's fooling whom? Was it really a better world? Or just a quieter one? A few years ago it was easy to hide from the evils around us. To turn our backs and pretend it really wasn't so. But God knows, it was. All that our modern communication system has done is bring it all out into the open. And about time. The fact is, God has probably been much too patient with our world. "Love your neighbor," He told us long ago. Not enough of us were listening and that's what today's turmoil is all about. And think about this: maybe—just maybe—God put us here right now because we're the ones who can start setting things straight.

Army Magazine Latest Target Of Fund Probe

GRAND RAPIDS (AP) — A glossy Army magazine filled with color photographs and descriptions of Vietnam's tourist attractions may lead to cuts in the Army's public relations budget if Sen. J. William Fulbright has his way.

Fulbright, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, got into the act when the Grand Rapids Press received a copy of the magazine "Hurricane" published by the Army's II Field Force in Vietnam.

Liz Hyman, the Michigan paper's military editor, wrote the Arkansas Democrat after receiving the September edition of the "Hurricane."

Miss Hyman asked why the taxpayers' money is being used to publish such a lavish magazine with limited circulation and limited interest.

I doubt U. S. soldiers are particularly interested in reading about Vietnamese tourist attractions while fighting the enemy in jungles," she observed.

After seeing Miss Hyman's copy of the magazine, Fulbright wrote saying he too was surprised that an army field unit would publish such a magazine and distribute it to newspapers in the United States.

Nevada was admitted to the Union in 1864 because its three votes were necessary to enact the 13th Amendment.

Steals Radio While In Jail

MARQUETTE — Charles Dowe is back in county jail again—accused of stealing while he was in jail previously.

Dowe, 21, Marquette, was arrested as he was waiting for a bus to leave the city. He was charged with simple larceny in connection with the theft of a radio from the courthouse office of District Judge George E. Hill.

Dowe pleaded innocent to the charge and asked for a court appointed attorney to defend him.

He allegedly stole the radio when he was serving a 10 day sentence on a vagrancy conviction. While in jail he was assigned a job of sweeping courthouse offices, including the judge's, authorities said.

Full Time Hunters Kill Most Of Deer

By LEE SMITS

Here are some vital statistics relating to the Michigan deer hunters:

Of the half million that take to the woods and wayside taverns at this season, about 10 per cent, or 50,000 are full-time hunters. Thirty per cent, 150,000, are part-time hunters. The rest are good-time hunters, harming no living thing, except, possibly, themselves.

A great many good-time hunters kid themselves, their families and friends. But not all of them. We were having sandwiches and coffee on a pine knoll on the Escanaba River during bird season—Ken Lowe, Tom Prawdzik and myself. Tom, game biologist, who studies the deer kill and deer killers, told of an Upper Peninsula camp that has strict rules. Any member spending more than 20 minutes at a stretch outdoors is fined $5.

A member convicted of firing a gun at a deer is required to take all hands into town and pay for a dinner. Those honest good-timers return to their homes much less haggard and nervous than the part-time hunters who play poker until long after midnight, get out on a runway before daybreak and mope around outdoors for hours and hours, walking as much as two or three miles a day.

THE THREE of us agreed that full-time hunters account for at least 80 per cent of the annual deer harvest.

It is easy to identify a full-time hunter. His clothing is worn and weathered. He probably does not wear a miniature compass attached to his lapel. His compass is a hefty item, in a shirt pocket. His knife is a well-honed jack-knife, in a pants pocket.

Look at his feet. They are encased in rubber boots, probably laced, half way to the knee. Leaving camp he may carry a bag, slung over his left shoulder; in the bag, a thermos, sandwich, maybe even a windbreaker, a sheet of plastic to sit on. This assumes that the full-time deer hunter of this era is a sitter, that being the surest way to hang up a buck—sit—sit—and sit.

A non-sitter can sit for half an hour, watching the sunrise illumine the frosty woods, then he is through sitting until twilight. He still-hunts, never letting the wind get at his back, never for one second letting his mind wander from the big intention.

THE PART-TIME HUNTER can immediately be identified by The Knife. This weapon is big enough to be used as a canoe paddle. It hangs at the man's hip. We know certain things about this fellow: He has not sighted in his rifle. He is toting last year's ammunition which should have been used up on a target range. Oh, sure, the 1963 ammo probably is okay, but why take even the slimmest gamble? The part-time hunter is a real nice guy. And chances are, much better company than the full-time hunter.

THE GOOD-TIME HUNTER is a fugitive from boss, wife, office, home, unanswered mail and electric shaver. He knows Ella, the barmaid at the Jackpine Cocktail Lounge, three miles off Freeway 75, and his heart leaps with joy when Ella remembers his name.

He may explain, to any stranger who will listen, that he can hang up his buck any time he wants to. It is possible that he will negotiate with a furtive native in the parking space behind the Jackpine Cocktail Lounge, and wheel back to town with a bootleg deer draped over the hood of his car.

Let it be understood that there is considerable intermingling of these species.

There are part-time hunters who, season after season, have amazing luck, or else are far more knowledgeable than they seem. There are even good-timers who can snap out of it and become deadly.

There are nowadays even lady hunters, and it would be a reasonable bet that a high percentage of them get what they're after. In general, they start out with the big advantage of single-mindedness, the ability to concentrate on the

HOW TO STALK DEER

In stalking, the hunter follows a fresh track to within rifle distance of the deer. Walk into the wind, if possible. Don't try to outrun the deer; follow slowly, and as quietly as possible. Move up to openings or tops of ridges slowly, then scan the area carefully before moving on. If you spook a deer, he will run awhile, so consider your distance from camp before going on.

The defensive armor of the porcupine consists of approximately 30,000 quills.

Robertson's 224 Trout Key To Fishing Revival

MARQUETTE — Sport fishermen who got their kicks out of landing large lake trout in Lakes Superior and Michigan this summer can thank Russ Robertson for a large measure of their pleasure.

Robertson, who has been supervisor of the state fish hatchery here since 1943, developed the lake trout brood stock at the hatchery that has been the primary source of lake trout eggs in the United States.

If it hadn't been for his foresight, the tremendously successful Great Lakes trout rehabilitation program might have been delayed for several years.

Instead, Lake Superior sport trollers this summer enjoyed the best lake trout fishing since the early 1950s. That was in the days before depredations of the parasitic sea lamprey decimated lake trout. Some charter boat operators claim trolling success this year was even better than in the pre-lamprey years.

Marquette Stocked

The spectacular revival of lake trout fishing can be attributed largely to an ambitious planting program — and practically all of the trout planted in United States waters of the Great Lakes have come from brood stock at the Department of Natural Resources hatchery in Marquette.

From 1939 to 1958, the Marquette hatchery relied on commercial fishermen to obtain the lake trout eggs used in restocking Lake Superior. During this period, 9,000,000 eggs were collected voluntarily from wild trout by commercial fishermen during the spawning period each fall and turned over to the hatchery here for eventual planting in Lake Superior.

Meanwhile, however, Robertson became convinced the state should have a reserve source of lake trout eggs in case of less of the natural supply. He persuaded the department to allow him to raise a number of lake trout at the hatchery to spawning age, which is five or six years. Out of the eggs hatched in 1949, Robertson held back 8,000 trout fry to be reared to spawners.

Eggs Unavailable

It's a good thing he did. In 1957, the amount of eggs collected by commercial fishermen dropped to only two quarts from the 156 quarts taken the previous year. The decline coincided with the increase in lamprey numbers and was so great that collecting of eggs from wild trout was discontinued the following year.

But meanwhile, 17,160 eggs were taken at the hatchery in 1954 from the 224 trout that survived to spawning age out of the 8,000 Robertson had held in reserve back in 1949. These 224 lakings became the famous brood stock that was destined to play such a vital role in the rehabilitation of their species in the Great Lakes.

Those original 224 trout accounted for a total of 1,330,638 eggs from 1954 until 1967, when they were considered too old to produce high quality eggs.

4,500 Trout Now

More importantly, they permitted Robertson gradually to increase his precious brood stock to its present size of 4,500 trout by holding back some of their eggs each year for four years.

Over the years, these 224 trout and their progeny have accounted for nearly all the lake trout eggs used in all state and national lake trout planting programs in the United States.

And that's saying a lot. Since 1954, the Marquette brood stock has yielded more than 88,000,000 eggs. This year alone, 11,500,000 eggs will be collected at the hatchery here. This single year's collection from the brood stock will total 2,500,000 more eggs than were taken by commercial fishermen in the entire 19 years from 1939 to 1958.

All but 300,000 of the eggs will be sent to the Jordan River federal hatchery in the northern Lower Peninsula for hatching and eventual planting in Lakes Superior and Michigan. The 300,000 remaining eggs will be held at the hatchery here for stocking inland lakes in Michigan.

The millions of eggs will be translated into millions of hours of fishing enjoyment, and a lot of the credit for it will belong to Russ Robertson and those 224 trout that made fishing history.

Hunters Should Respect Property

There's more to a successful hunting season than the bagging of limit of pheasant, grouse, Dr. Deer.

"Think about the next time you'll be hunting the same fields or woods, and consider what your reception may be then," says a man who has given a lot of thought to hunting areas and not just what's in them.

And he isn't talking about how well you'll be received by the wild game, either. He's referring to the landowner and what his reception will be like, depending upon how you have been using, or in many cases, misusing his land while hunting.

"Since most hunting today is done on private land, it is surprising how many hunters give so little thought to promoting and maintaining good landowner - sportsman relations," says W. L. Hammond, supervisor of sporting goods operations for the F. W. Woolworth Co.

As the hunting seasons are now open throughout the nation the hunting expert is advising all who take to the fields and woods to give more than passing thought to the property owner and his lands. Starting with the cardinal rule of hunting only after permission has been granted, Hammond goes on to recommend other pointers for maintaining good relations with landowners.

For example, he notes that private farm roads and lanes are important links on the land and advises the hunter not to drive on them without permission. They can be easily damaged, particularly during wet periods occurring frequently this time of year.

"Respect the purposes of gates and fences," he says. Leave gates just as you find them. A landowner's time is valuable, and he doesn't want to spend it rounding up strayed livestock.

An important rule to follow, according to Hammond, is not to hunt or shoot around farm ponds without special permission. They are usually special-use areas and are not there just to complement the scenery. Livestock use them for watering purposes and often landowners use them for family recreation.

Crops are a landowner's livelihood and it's best not to hunt in planted areas. And most of all, don't build a camp fire without permission.

On littering, Hammond says, "Most landowners are as proud of their property as you are of yours. Cans, bottles or papers left by hunters after a lunch irritate them, so put them in your hunting coat and take them with you."

It's important also not to damage posting signs. "That's the surest way of keeping them up," the sportsman warns.

Last, but not least by any means—when hunting on or near farms remember that a pheasant and a chicken are two different types of birds, and cow meat doesn't taste at all like venison. Make sure before you shoot!

GETTING READY — A Portage Marsh duckhunter sets his decoys in preparation for the hunt. Hunters brave enough to go out in the marsh in cold weather are coming up with some excellent bags this fall, according to reports issued by the Department of Natural Resources. A good amount of flight ducks from the Canadian provinces are expected to arrive around mid-November, says Joe Vogt, district game biologist for the DNR.

Animal World Prepares For Long Winter's Nap

A dependable biological time clock has ticked out a message to the animal world: It is time to prepare for the winter withdrawal.

As man turns his thoughts to football and early Christmas shopping, many animals ready themselves for a long nap, the National Geographic Society says.

With the approach of freezing weather and snow in North America's temperate zone, squirrels, groundhogs, and chipmunks work to lay aside a winter's supply of food.

Turtles, frogs, snakes, spiders, snails, mosquitoes, and other reptiles and insects are about to make their annual disappearance from their normal environment.

Non-hibernators

Although warm-blooded mammals depend on a constant body temperature, they usually do not hibernate. Leaf-chewing mammals such as deer and rabbits, and meat eaters such as foxes, wolves and wildcats, stay in their natural habitats through the winter months and forage for a slim living.

The insect- and plant-eating animals meet winter weather and food-shortage problems in their own way. Although warm-blooded in summer, they can take on cold-blooded characteristics for a long winter sleep.

These include the ground squirrel, woodchuck, skunk, raccoon, chipmunk, opossum, dormouse, bat, and others.

Some hibernators take winter supplies into their burrows. Others, like the golden hamster, sleep on or near a cache of food and awaken periodically to enjoy a snack.

The bear, raccoon, woodchuck, and others gorge themselves before holing up for the winter, existing for a long time on their stored fat.

Bear Loses Weight

The bear, though not a true hibernator, enjoys a prolonged sleep in winter. His metabolic activity, or the rate his body uses nourishment, is reduced and his temperature drops slightly. He loses perhaps 25 per cent of his weight during the three-month rest.

The female bear gets less sleep than her mate because she gives birth to one or two cubs during the winter.

The self-fattened woodchuck or groundhog prepares an extensive burrow with two or more openings and curls up in sleep in late October or early November.

When he reappears in early February, he will be lean and hungry for a meal and a mate — and he could hardly care less whether he sees his shadow.

FIRST DEER — This young U. P. hunter with the smile of victory on his face has just shot his first deer. But is this the climax, the final climax. Not by a long shot. The deer should be dressed out as soon as possible to prevent the meat from spoiling. What you do after you've shot your deer is fully as important as the actual kill itself.

Check On Hearts

Dormant muscles may ache and weak lungs may gasp in protest when subjected to the rigors of a day's hunting, but they will recover in time. A tired heart suddenly called upon to do double or triple duty is another matter. It could be fatal.

Each year, when statistics on hunting fatalities are compiled, heart attack victims make up a considerable percentage of the final tally. Many of these attacks might have been avoided had the victims given the same careful attention to their hearts as they did to their guns.

The first precautionary step is basic. See your personal physician for a complete physical checkup. Even if he gives you a clean bill of health, don't pass up the second basic step — exercise.

Few hunters bother with a year - round exercise program. After a long layoff, a reconditioning of the body is essential if it is to withstand the strains of a rugged hunting experience.

If you kill a deer, don't be too proud to ask for and accept help in dragging it out. If you have a heart condition, let someone else do the dragging.

How To Handle That Venison

That big buck draped over one side of your car hood may put it in a good position to be admired by not - so - fortunate hunters but it doesn't do much for the meat.

Proper cooling after killing a deer, then transporting it in the coolest possible manner will pay off big dividends at the dinner table later on.

Once your deer is down, don't waste a lot of time before dressing it out completely. This should include removal of everything from stem to stern, including the heart and lungs in the chest cavity. If near a creek, don't be afraid to slush a few buckets of water inside the cavity to remove all blood and hair, but be sure to dry it out right away with clean cloths.

The carcass should be cool several hours before it is transported. Prop the body open with a stick wedge cross-wise. If possible, hang the deer from a tree or over a fence where it can continue to drain as much as possible. Getting the deer off the ground will help it cool faster.

Hauling your deer by car is best done on a cartop carrier or tied across the trunk. If you have room and the deer is completely cooled out, you can also carry it inside the trunk. In this latter case, however, don't park for long periods of time in the sun unless you want your venison half-cooked by the time you get it back home.

The trumpeter swan, with a maximum weight of 40 pounds, is the heaviest flying bird in North America.

Good Deer Herd In Escanaba Area

According to district game biologist Joe Vogt, hunting prospects for this year are less promising than last season.

The main reason for this was the prolonged winter season and the relatively poor condition of the female deer during the time they carried their fawns.

Extremely deep snow conditions arrived early last year and before the winter was over the Department of Natural Resources had to initiate an emergency deer feeding program.

In the Escanaba District alone over 100 tons of surplus corn was furnished to volunteers to feed hungry deer. Vogt estimated that about 10 per cent of the area herd was helped by this emergency feed.

A mild thawing condition appeared by late January, and the snowfall during the first few months of the year was low. Spring breakup, however, was very late in arriving because of the cold weather in March and April.

"Overwinter losses were not as heavy as we expected, but they were over the previous winter's loss," Vogt told the Daily Press. The late, cold spring kept the deer in the yards for a prolonged period resulting in the rapid deterioration of their physical condition, Vogt reported. "They have, however, recovered well this past summer with heavy feeding," he added.

Vogt said the fawn production this past spring was low because of the poor physical condition of the mothers. "Weak fawns and failure of milk production by the does probably resulted in the rate of mortality," he said.

Vogt estimated this fall's herd in the Escanaba District to be around 66,000 deer. He said the Department of Natural Resources expects a four per cent take of female deer by hunters in the area this fall.

"Overbrowsing by deer causes even more range deterioration. When enough deer are taken in the fall, there is plenty of food for each animal the following winter. A high percentage of the over-winter herd will survive in vigorous condition. There may even be a little extra food left over after the winter.

"If not enough deer are taken in the fall and a hard winter follows, there is not enough food for the extra animals. Deer starve by the thousands, but before they die they severely overbrowse the range. Thus, there is even less food for deer for the next winter. This is another reason why, after large starvation losses, it is even more important to take an adequate number of deer the following fall."

Kill Didn't Reduce Herd

If shooting too many deer was the cause of the declining buck kill in the Upper Peninsula, it should follow that there isn't a deer left in the northern Lower Peninsula, says the Department of Natural Resources (DNR).

Since 1952 hunters have taken nearly two and a half times as many deer from the northern Lower Peninsula as they have above the Straits of Mackinac in the U. P. They've taken almost twice as many bucks and nearly four times as many antlerless deer. However, in spite of the much greater annual kill, the Lower Peninsula buck kill is holding up and hasn't shown the steady decline of the Upper Peninsula!

It's not "doe" shooting even though it usually gets the blame, suggest game biologists. The fact of the matter is, they say, that there are fewer deer because there is less deer food than there used to be. Vast areas of the forest are growing up, and the former brush country that produced deer food now has solid stands of larger trees.

The DNR states:

"This is the real reason for the long-range decline that has been taking place. Last year's severe drops was caused by the absence of younger deer in the herd. A couple of mild winters and the herd will rebuild — but not to the glorious levels of the good old days of the late 40's.

"This steady decline in deer food production is not imaginary! It's serious and it's real — about three to seven per cent per year. This decline will not keep up forever. Timber cutting and other range improvement work will slow it down; and as timber matures and is harvested, the trend will eventually reverse.

SNOWSHOE HARES

The snowshoe hare is the "rabbit" of the north, although technically not a rabbit at all. They are most often found in large northern swamps where there is plenty of young brush. They are also called varying hares because their fur changes from brown in summer to white in winter. Most hunting is done after snow covers the ground in winter.

Once, so common that it was found in the nation's largest cities, including Washington, D. C., the peregrine falcon (duck hawk) faces extinction today and is the latest addition to the Interior Department's list of endangered wildlife species.

STEELHEAD BAIT

Steelhead normally do not feed in the river, yet will take a bait or hit lures. Fresh salmon or steelhead roe tied in small nylon mesh bags and rolled along the bottom probably account for most of the fish caught. Good fast-action plugs fished along bottom in key holes take most of the larger fish.

Anglers Fish 48 Hours For Each Sturgeon

The sturgeon season on the Menominee River opens every fall, usually from early September to November 1. During that time an angler will be permitted to take two fish which are a minimum of 42 inches.

The sturgeon that are legal in the Menominee are described as rock or lake sturgeon. They grow to a very large size and fish in excess of 50 pounds are not uncommon. In 1965 Norman Walk of Marinette caught a 67 pound specimen that was 65 inches long. The fish was aged by the Conservation Department and it was estimated that it was about 50 years old.

Reproduction of sturgeon in the Menominee has been good but it is obvious that a great deal of the spawn produced is lost. These large fish spawn every four to seven years and each spawner deposits millions of eggs into the stream. If a good percentage of these eggs were to develop into fish the waters of the Menominee would not be able to hold the sturgeon population.

There have been reports of sturgeon being netted in Green Bay by commercial fishermen. While the fish is a trophy for a hook and line angler, it is nothing but a nuisance to the commercial fishermen. A sturgeon is capable of rolling up and tearing a good many feet of netting once it is caught and many a set has been ruined by these lunkers.

For many years sturgeon have been the target of poachers and the popular method of taking sturgeon illegally is with the use of setlines. A setline is placed across a river and the "line" is a strong rope. From this main line sets of lighter line are placed at close intervals. The lines are armed with large, weighted hooks. Sturgeon roll along the bottom during feeding and when they encounter the setline they are frequently hooked. Action is given to the setline by the current in the river and the weighted hooks act like a jig-type bait.

Once the flesh of the sturgeon is pierced it usually is caught by several other hooks in its attempts to free itself. All that is left for the poacher to do is lift the setline and retrieve the fish. Some poachers process the spawn, known as caviar, and sell both the caviar and the flesh of the fish.

Poaching has done much to reduce the sturgeon population throughout the state and for many years these fish were protected with closed seasons. During the past several years increased law enforcement has resulted in less poaching and the sturgeon population has increased.

Sturgeon fishing is a tedious job. One angler kept score and discovered that he had averaged about 48 hours of fishing for each sturgeon he caught. The deep holes in the Menominee are the favorite fishing ground and anglers use heavy lines weighted so that the bait lies on the bottom of the river. Bait ranges from nightcrawlers to chicken viscera. Some anglers fish from the banks of the river and it is not uncommon to see a fisherman lounging in a chair as he waits for a sturgeon to take his bait.

This kind of fishing is not an attraction to every angler. Many seek more action and don't have the patience to wait for hours on end. But to those that enjoy the sport the rewards are great. There are many hours to enjoy the wonder of nature — in between sturgeon strikes — and if you do happen to land a legal fish you have a trophy. Besides, the flesh of the sturgeon is very tasty whether it is smoked, fried, or baked.

Black bear cubs are born in midwinter while their mother is still in hibernation. They weigh a half-pound apiece, are blind and nearly naked.

SWAMPS GROWN UP - BROWSED OUT

By LEE SMITS

At this time of year in days gone by, just before first snowfall, lumber camps throughout Michigan, north of Bay City—Muskegon—were being manned for the winter harvesting. An important member of a crew was the camp hunter. He might be on the payroll as a swamper—at maybe $26 a month, plus a bonus for each deer brought in—like $5 per deer.

Deer were not much more abundant than now, but they were a lot less man-shy. Wolves were fairly common, and deer learned that wolves avoided the presence of mankind, so that there were more deer in the general vicinity of lumber camps than there were in more remote territory.

Careful questioning of successful camp hunters—those that could be believed—revealed that they did very well to kill a deer a day, without regard to sex or size.

The 1969 deer hunter might take a few useful hints from the old-time professionals. Glaring colors were not then in vogue among hunters. Woolen clothing was standard. For foot-gear, high rubbers with leather tops, were worn inside trouser legs.

Belt knives were scorned, because they were worn by "farmers" from "down below." To the woodsman, the lowest form of life was a farmer, a hay-kicker, a moss back. Permanent residents of the north called visiting hunters "the kerosene gang," claiming the invaders went to great lengths to avoid spending any money in the northern counties, even lugging kerosene from "down below." In that era "down below" was all territory south of Saginaw Bay. In later years, "down below" was applied to everything south of the Straits of Mackinac.

Let's take a look at a camp hunter. Instead of a sheath knife he carried an encrusted jack knife, with a big blade kept razor sharp. He was armed with a 30-30 rifle. He carried a length of clothesline for hanging up a dressed deer. In general, he considered a compass an affectation. Said he never could get lost.

The camp hunter explored his territory until he was familiar with the goings and comings of all the deer in the region. He had no prejudice in favor of bucks. His clientele favored yearlings. For Thanksgiving or Christmas he aimed to provide a tender hind-quarter that could be boned and baked as a turkey substitute, complete with stuffing.

The camp hunter knew how to walk in the woods, without having to watch his feet. He could drift along, silent as a shadow, scanning every foot of cover along the way. When he shot he usually could tell whether it was a hit or a miss, by the way the target deer behaved. If he had drawn blood, he smoked a pipe or two before taking up the trail, giving a wounded deer a chance to lie down and stiffen. He was more of a hunter than a sitter, although he would post himself on a runway for an hour at

A lumber camp usually had a team of chuck sled ponies, employed in delivering mid-day meals to men in the timber. A dressed deer was hauled into camp by the chuck team, if the ponies were not too fearful of blood scent. Jenny, a smart little corral mare, actually seemed to enjoy hauling a deer carcass. Once the deer was secured to Jenny, a slap on the haunch would start her on her careful way back to camp.

A camp hunter knew how to bring a speeding deer to a stop by blatting. He had many tales of wild life, most of them incredible. He might well be a trapper at odd times and he would entertain an interested green-horn with beaver myths. A bank beaver, he explained, was a discredited engineer that had botched plans for a dam and pond and was banished from the colony.

In every beaver house, he said, there was beaver that slept with its tail in the water. This beaver knew at once if the dam was broken and the pond started to drain.

Musk rats were kept as slaves by a beaver colony. Fabulous monsters lurked in the depths of Michigan forests—the hide-behind, the side-hill gouger, and deadliest of all, the snow snake.

Fly Fishing Is Easy To Learn

A sure cure for the modest cough of the occasional fisherman is to take up fly fishing, say the experts. Fly casting is easier than it looks. So get ready to fish the trout streams. Here is how to do it:—

1. FIRST — Strip about 20 feet of line off the reel and work it out through the rod guides by false casting a few feet of line at a time.

2. BEGIN — Cast begins with rod tip at eye level. Loop of line is held in left hand. Thumb of rod hand should lie along upper surface of rod handles.

3. LIFT — Pull line off water by lifting rod smartly. Rod should feel like an extension of forearm pivoting from the elbow with wrist stiff.

4. STOP — Arm movement stops as rod hand comes to vertical position. Rod may flex slightly, but the wrist should be stiff. Pause with rod arm motionless as line straightens in the air behind you.

5. CAST — When you feel the line pull on the rod, down smartly in forward cast. As rod swings forward stress forward stroke by thumb pressure on the upper surface of the handle.

6. FINISH — Stop forward motion of the rod when nearly horizontal and release line loop held in left hand. At the end of the line's forward motion the line should extend completely in the air to a point two or three feet over target and then fall gently to the water.

TO GET THE GREATEST DISTANCE — strip off more line, holding it in long, loose loops in your left hand. As rod hand completes downward swing and pull of line is felt, allow slack line to "shoot," loop by loop, off your hand.

A 20-inch female sucker may lay as many as 100,000 eggs, most of which will hatch, but only a couple of the offspring will survive to spawn.

TARGET FOR HUNTERS — Which would you shoot if you had this shot staring you in the face? Most hunters would take the big eight-point buck. If you don't have a doe permit you wouldn't have a choice. Every year many doe are shot by hunters illegally. Remember, a doe not shot could mean a buck for next season.

First License For Deer Set Limit Of Five

How times have changed! Department of Natural Resources officials have released a "short history" on deer licensing in Michigan. First year a license was required to hunt deer was 1895 and the "limit" was five deer of either sex.

Only 14,477 licenses were sold that first year. Last year 663,125 licenses were sold.

The chronology:
1895—first license required—limit five deer either sex, 14,477 licenses sold.

1901—limit reduced to three deer either sex, 15,600 sold.

1905—limit reduced to two deer either sex, 14,800 sold.

1915—limit down to one deer either sex, 14,800 sold.

1921—limit still one deer, but only bucks, 28,000 sold.

1941—limit still one deer—bucks only, but a camp deer of either sex allowed, 230,000 sold.

1952—limit one deer—bucks only, except for certain areas where does allowed on special permit, 454,000 sold.

1960—limit one deer, 460,915 licenses sold.

1961—limit one deer, 426,254 sold.

1962—limit one deer, 465,672 sold.

1963—limit one deer, 515,720 sold.

1964—limit one deer, 634,950 licenses sold.

1968—limit one deer, 663,125 licenses sold.

TIPS FOR COHO FISHERMEN

In the spring and summer, coho can be found in open waters near concentrations of alewives or smelt. Generally, this is in the upper 40 feet. Trolling, mooching and bobbing are successful techniques.

Good Behavior Is Hunting Necessity

One of the major fallacies handed down by sportsmen from one generation to another is the belief that hunting (or fishing for that matter) is a right rather than a privilege.

The origin of this misconception is not altogether clear but more than likely it stems from the fact that fish and wildlife are the property of the state and therefore available to the public for harvesting.

The latter premise is indisputable, but it does not automatically grant a hunter or a fisherman the right to enter upon another man's land without the permission of the owner. The game may be public property, but the land is private.

The landowner - sportsman problem did not present itself in major proportion until after World War II when land suddenly became a highly profitable item for speculation or investment and an increased interest in hunting swelled the ranks of sportsmen to record numbers.

Some landowners needed only this increase in hunting pressure as an excuse or reason to post their properties. Others, reluctant to follow suit because they either fished or hunted themselves, waited with tolerance. They didn't have too long to wait.

With the new breed of sportsman came a peculiar brand of behavior. It embraced the belief that a hunter or a fisherman had the unquestionable right to venture upon another man's property, whether that property was posted or not.

It also included fringe benefits. If a fence blocked access, it could be cut. If a pheasant broke cover too close to the landowner's house, the harvest of that bird was more important than the safety of inhabitants within, or the property damage that might result.

If posters were present prohibiting trespassing without permission, they could be peppered with birdshot or torn down. If a farmer's barnway was the only convenient place for parking a car, the car could be parked and the farmer left with the problem of getting his cattle out.

If a tree or a shrub struck the fancy of this peculiar breed of sportsman, he could dig it up and take it home. If he chose to eat lunch while afield there was nothing wrong in littering the landscape with rubbish.

If he needed a little target practice, what better objects than the window of a dwelling, a piece of farm equipment, or a water tower?

Such irresponsible behavior, all apparently based on the belief that the hunter has all the rights and the landowner none, has resulted in the mass posting of land and strained relations between both parties. There is no question that the sportsman has lost ground in the skirmish.

Few sportsmen seem to exert an effort in attempting to understand the landowner's position. They view landposting as a hostile act, an indication that the property owner is against hunting and fishing. They fail to see such action as a defensive measure, a final resort on the part of any self-respecting man to protect that which belongs to him.

Many sportsmen will find, if they take the time and trouble, that a landowner will gladly allow hunting or fishing if he's asked for permission, regardless of the signs that might rim his property. He needs only to know that you hold some respect for him.

Sportsmen cannot afford to ignore this problem much longer, or to fight it with hostility or acts of vandalism. Land is being swallowed up too rapidly by commercial developers. That which is still suitable for hunting need not remain idle and wasted behind "No Trespassing" signs.

The man who trespasses upon another's property without permission, or abuses it in any way, would be the first to post his land if the situation were reversed.

With hunting season open, let every sportsman pay particular attention to this most urgent problem. Visit the man on whose property you plan to hunt, ask for permission where it is necessary, and let him know you appreciate the privilege.

You'll find he's a regular guy. He may even show you where the best hunting is. And you'll enjoy your sport with the feeling that you're welcome, not with the guilt of a trespasser.

Accept the fact that you are a guest on his land, enjoying a privilege made possible only through his generosity, that you have no right there unless he says so.

Remember that hunting or fishing another man's land is a privilege, not a right. The future of our outdoor sports depends on it.

Delta County has a heavy population of fox and coyotes.

Mishaps Caused By Carelessness

Why do "hunting accidents" happen? There are no exact answers to that question unless it might be, "Carelessness."

Here are examples of the ways in which hunters have killed themselves or their companions:

— Hunter was clubbing a deer when rifle discharged into his stomach.

— Unlicensed hunter, 15, was poking into a rabbit hole with rifle held by barrel; rifle discharged and bullet lodged in brain.

— Hunter, 69, placed loaded rifle, with safety off, through fence in upright position, climbed fence, jarred rifle which fired into his abdomen.

rifle, 16-year-old hunter stumbled, rifle with safety off struck ground, bullet fired into companion's head.

— Youth had finger on trigger as he was unloading rifle. It discharged into head of companion.

— Rifle trigger caught in hunter's clothing and discharged in his chest.

— Hunter was taking illegally loaded rifle out of a car when trigger caught in other equipment. Bullet hit companion in stomach.

— Carrying rifle with safety off, shooter stumbled. Bullet entered companion's chest.

— Old, unsafe rifle discharged into one hunter's chest when he rested it on the hammer while climbing a fence.

Anglers Need Report Card

You are required to have a Salmon-Trout Report Form with a record of your take in your possession when fishing for trout or salmon in the Great Lakes and during extended seasons in designated inland waters. The Report Form is available from license dealers or any Department Field Office.

— Using his rifle as a crutch, a hunter was shot in the ribs as he crossed an obstacle.

Not one of these "accidents" would have happened if the people involved had used common sense. Gun safety training, to create an awareness of the penalty of carelessness, could have saved every one of these lives!

Tips On Getting Ready For Season

In the spring, a young man's fancy turns to thoughts of love. Along about this time every year, a lot of men's thoughts turn to deer hunting.

Michigan's deer season for gun hunters gets underway Nov. 15. Before it ends, Nov. 30, upwards of 600,000 hunters will have spent at least a few hours stalking deer.

If hunting follows the normal pattern—and there is no reason to expect that it won't unless the Packers play—the greatest army of hunters will creep into the woods of Michigan early opening morning, Nov. 15, and will still be there Sunday afternoon.

By the end of the first week in the Upper Peninsula, hunting pressure will have dropped to season lows, leaving the deer virtually to themselves until Thanksgiving weekend.

Being in the woods hunting, however, is only a part of the hunt. What is done before the season can play almost as great a part in success as squeezing the trigger with a buck in the sights.

Check your equipment now. Boots that leak or allow your feet to get cold can spoil any outdoor trip.

What about your rifle? Do you know where it shoots—for sure? After you have missed the buck of a lifetime is a poor time to wish you had sighted in your rifle!

Sighting-In

If you happen to be sighting your rifle with no outside help, do it from some sort of rest, such as a sandbag or a rolled-up coat. Find out exactly where your bullets are hitting the target at 100 yards, then adjust the sights so you are shooting two inches high. This will allow you to aim exactly at the point where you expect to hit and your rifle is going to kill deer anywhere from 25 to 250 yards.

Get acquainted with your compass. This piece of equipment is something every hunter should keep with him all season. Having a compass is not enough, though, unless the hunter knows how to use it—then uses it that way.

Once in the woods, an occasional check with a compass can save a lot of lost time. But it won't do a bit of good unless you know which way you went when you started into the woods.

It's also a good idea to leave a note visible in your car or at camp which tells which direction you have gone. This way, should you happen to get lost, searchers will know where to start looking.

It's also a good idea, particularly for non-resident hunters, to register your hunting party and camp location with the State Police or Department of Natural Resources in event of an emergency at home. Local radio stations cooperate with police agencies by broadcasting emergency messages.

If you should get completely lost and night is coming, stay put. Find a good opening, if possible, near a good wood supply and build three fires in a triangle pattern. This design will be so unusual that it is sure to be noticed by aircraft searchers or can be seen in the daytime by searchers on foot. Stay there and you'll be rescued!

Volumes could be written—and have been—on the best methods of hunting deer. There are valuable pointers in all of these books.

In the event you kill a deer, treat it right. Dress it out right away. This means take out all of his "innards," including the heart and lungs which are a little hard to get at up inside the chest cavity.

A good, sharp knife, used in the right way can serve to split the bone between the back legs, thus opening up the entire body cavity. Or, a small hand axe can do it even quicker. The important thing is to remove all of the body organs which would possibly contaminate the meat.

Don't Use Fenders

Tying your deer onto a fender, alongside the hot car motor, makes a fine picture when the hunter comes driving home. It's a lousy way to treat good meat, though. It is far better to haul a deer home on top of a cartop carrier or tied across the trunk of a sedan. The idea is to keep as much cold air flowing across the carcass as possible.

The Black River near Bessemer has some excellent bass and trout waters.

Smokey Says:

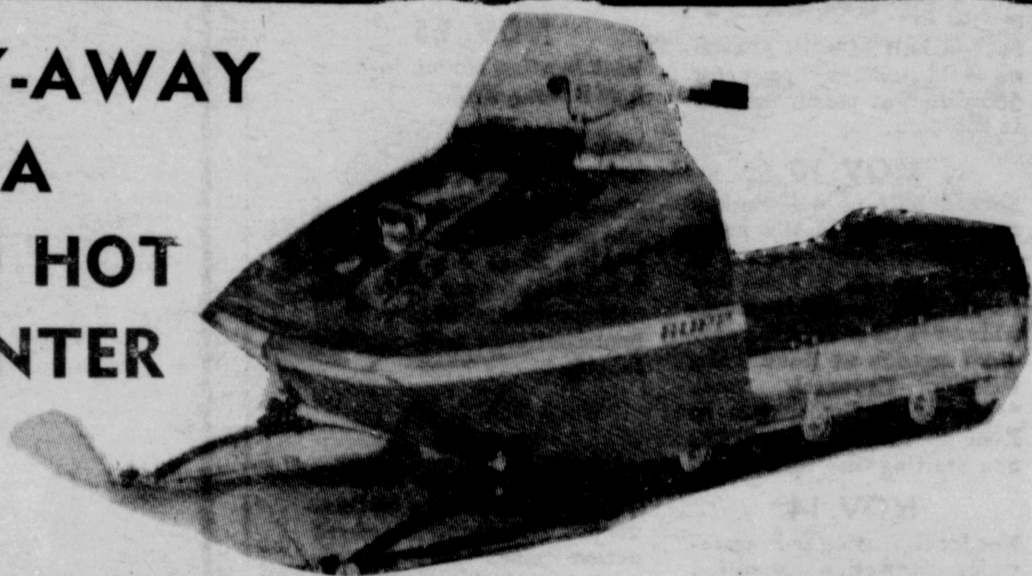

9 out of 10 Forest Fires are caused by people!

STEELHEAD ARE POPULAR

Steelhead are one of Michigan's most popular game fish. Originally only the rainbows that migrated from West Coast rivers into the Pacific Ocean where they grew big and silvery were called steelhead. We similarly call our rainbows that mature in the Great Lakes steelhead because they also grow big and silvery.

Rupp. The red hot reputation.
The man building it.

In a newspaper article about our president, Mick Rupp, the headline read, "Speedster Heads Fast Company." And they were right — about the man, his machines and his company. Mick Rupp is dedicated to going first class for fun. If he doesn't enjoy a product, he doesn't build it. He lives for fun and knowing that true enjoyment is only reached when shared with others — he builds for your fun. Mick is a mechanically minded football playing engineer from Purdue who has proved his faith in his products by running them in hot competition and winning — with cycles, karts and snowmobiles. He knows how to drive to get the best out of people and machines. But that's not all. There's more about this man Mick. Add to his list of credits as being one of the top ten sprint car drivers in the country. In his first time out, a money winner on the bricks of the Indy 500. A pilot who tools around and raced his own converted P-51 Mustang fighter plane — as well as relaxing in the skies behind the controls of our company's twin turbo Beech. On the ground he gets his kicks behind the wheel of his metallic flaked dune buggy. On the water he's either skiing or horsing around in his hydro. In the winter, it's either his racey iceboat or his well tuned snowmobile. He hunts. He fishes. You name it Mick does it. An all around sportsman that has a feel for fun.

Why are we telling you all this about the man that builds the machine you're interested in. Because it proves that Mick knows and appreciates quality, efficiency and safety — and how to engineer these elements into a fun machine for you.

'Authentic' Hunter Determined Type

By LEE SMITS

At this season the most dangerous animal in the world is loose in Michigan—man, the hunter—shedding most of the brittle layer of civilization he has recently acquired. As a matter of fact, this carnivore is not as deadly as many people think he is. There is more risk in the journey to and from the hunting grounds than there is on the scene.

Statistics show that the more hunters there are per square mile the less likelihood there is of any one of them getting accidentally shot. In territory where anything moving in the woods is expected to be human, everybody is extra careful.

A study of this formidable creature, the hunter, reveals that there are numerous species and sub-species, ranging from one who preys on rabbits to the grim specimen intent on bear.

The Deer Slayer

Taking up those who pursue deer, we might attempt a classification, starting with the type that actually hunts deer. Although no accurate figures are available, it is fair to assume that maybe 25 per cent of deer hunters hunt deer. Thousands of others are content to be free of domestic bondage, happy to let their whiskers grow and to sit up all night playing poker. Their hunting consists of brief strolls along a road, then back to the warm camp.

The deer killer can usually be identified by his costume. His clothing shows signs of wear. He does not wear his trouser legs stuffed into tall boots. He does not display a hunting knife big enough for a canoe paddle. He wears no canvas to produce a rattle in the brush.

The authentic deer hunter hunts, intensively, from the instant he steps outdoors, not waiting until he reaches some favorite spot in the woods. No matter how long he has owned the same rifle, he sights it in every year before going north. He takes great pride in his ability to dress out a deer and hang it up, or at least haul it into position to drain properly.

He does not shoot at porcupines, ravens or woodpeckers. He would much rather pass up a shot at a deer than to shoot at something he hoped might be a buck. If he returns to camp with a deer's heart and liver impaled on a forked stick he probably learned deer-hunting with backwoods natives.

If we follow this particular deer-hunter we discover that he knows how to still-hunt, how to walk quietly, standing still at frequent intervals to scan every inch of terrain within his field of vision. He rarely bothers to follow deer tracks very far because he knows that it is almost impossible to distinguish buck tracks from doe tracks and he also knows that he is more likely to drive the deer to another hunter than he is to catch up with it.

Perhaps the most important asset of the present-day deer hunter is the ability to sit still and keep on the alert. He finds the routes that deer use on their daily travels and he stations himself accordingly, and stays put.

Many Kinds

It is probable that this variety of deer hunter is in bed or bunk before midnight and that he enters upon no nocturnal drinking contest.

What about 75 per cent of the annual north-bound legion? They are by no means useless. They add to the fiscal flow in northern communities; they are likely to be good companions; they may buy deer or their partners may shoot deer for them, illegally. If they should return to their homes without deer, no one is disturbed. Their wives know what to expect.

A rocky, fast-flowing small stream usually provides enjoyable fishing but, owing to limited food supply, rarely holds big trout.

Some Excellent Tips For Better Fishing

How, when and where are the three most important guideposts for a fisherman and the guideposts vary from species to species, from place to place and season to season, but there are some generally accepted probabilities:

Best fishing is early and late — early and late in the day as well as early and late in the season. Warmer shallow waters yield best results early in the season and early in the day. Deep, cold waters produce best results around midday and misseason. Later in the season, it is well to fish in the deepening waters off points.

Some tips on catching your favorite fish:

NORTHERN PIKE strike on spoons, minnow and exciter plugs, frogs and live minnows. Cast in shallows around weed beds, near stream mouths and up weedy shore lines. Troll underwater along edges of weeds.

MUSKELLUNGE like big sucker minnows or frogs and often bite on large plugs and other artificial lures. Grassy bays, lily pads and the edges of weed beds are most apt to hide the Muskies.

BROOK TROUT live in spring fed streams and in northern lakes. Flies and small lures for these delicious fish, but they will bite, also, on worms, insects and small minnows. It is best to cast into deep pools and into the tail of fast stream currents for Brook Trout.

WALLEYED PIKE like to travel in schools and are most often found in lakes with sandy or rocky bottoms. Minnow-action plugs used for casting or trolling will attract walleyes best. Minnows work well when bottom fishing for walleye. Reefs, sand bars and the edges are good places to find walleyes, and at night they can often be found in shallower water.

CRAPPIE — Small spinners, wet flies, small minnows and insects are the best bait for this popular fish. Another school fish, Crappies like quiet waters around the outer edges of weed beds, at dropoffs, over sandbars and around docks and pilings.

THE SUNFISH FAMILY which includes the largemouth and smallmouth bass, offers a variety of challenges to the fisherman. Largemouth bass bite on frogs, nightcrawlers, worms and minnows, as well as popping lures. Weed beds and lily pads yield the most bass, and fishing near shore mornings and evening produces the best bass fishing.

DON'T SHOOT CUB BEARS — This cute little creature nibbling on a twig is not to be hunted like his older and more game parents. Michigan hunting laws forbid shooting young-of-the-year bear. Most bear have gone to rest for the winter by the time deer season comes around, but a good hunter with a sharp eye might still bag one of these big U. P. carnivores that hasn't gone to sleep yet.

Deer Hunters To Get Free Service

Deer hunters in Michigan are reminded that the Departments of State Police and Natural Resources provide a free registration service for those nimrods who wish to be notified in event of emergencies in their homes.

This service, which has been available annually, is for genuine emergencies only and is not to be expected by hunters or their families where regular communications facilities can be used without undue delay.

Hunters should tell their families the name of the State Police post or district Natural Resources Department office nearest to their camp where they will be registering.

An accurate location of the camp should be given to the State Police or Natural Resources Departments by the hunters. This registration information should be updated if the hunter changes camps during the season.

This emergency plan works

two ways since it also enables the families of hunters to be notified by the authorities in event an emergency arises in the camps.

Should an emergency develop at home, families should notify the State Police or Natural Resources Department office where the hunter is registered. The message will then be delivered from there to the camp.

DEER DRIVES

Station one or two hunters on the best openings or runways, they have the other hunters string out in a line through a swamp or woods, and make a clatter while walking toward the stationed hunters. Sometimes, deer will try to sneak or bust back through the line of drivers, and this can be dangerous if everyone starts shooting. In some camps, drivers are not allowed to carry guns. When the stationed hunters bag their deer, they go turn-about and become drivers for the other hunters.

Trout Fishermen Are More Sportsmenlike

By BOB VOGES

The trout fisherman is more of a sportsman and less of a violator than the salmon fisherman, according to arrest records of the State Department of Natural Resources.

During the salmon runs last fall and the year before, some of the greedy fish grabbers went berserk. The salmon craze created a major enforcement problem for the department.

By contrast, the arrest record was low over the opening of the regular trout season.

John Anguilm, chief of the department's law enforcement division, reported only 26 arrests in the northern Lower Peninsula — the state's most popular angling area.

Skill Of Catch

Anguilm said reports were not in yet from southern Michigan and the Upper Peninsula. He added he did not think these would send the total much higher.

"This is a small number for a weekend," Anguilm said. "The dyed-in-the-wool fisherman goes up to fish. He gets more enjoyment out of his skill than the catch generally."

"A lot of those who went after the salmon had never ever fished before," Anguilm added. "The problem fishermen came in two categories — the meat fishermen from the cities and the local people who made a game out of violating."

Violations over the trout opener included 13 persons found fishing without a license, one non-resident fishing on a resident license, three found with undersize trout in possession and nine taking trout illegally.

Littering

The nine illegally taking trout included four using spears, three using landing nets and two caught grabbing the trout by hand.

Littering, trespassing and taking salmon by almost every illegal means a mind might imagine were the major violations of the salmon fishermen.

State Police made 647 litter arrests during the season. Conservation officers picked up 150. Beaches and private property were strewn with beer cans and bottles, garbage, papers and other debris.

"A major violation was the use of oversized hooks to snag the salmon," Anguilm said. "Others used sticks to herd the fish into nets strung across the streams."

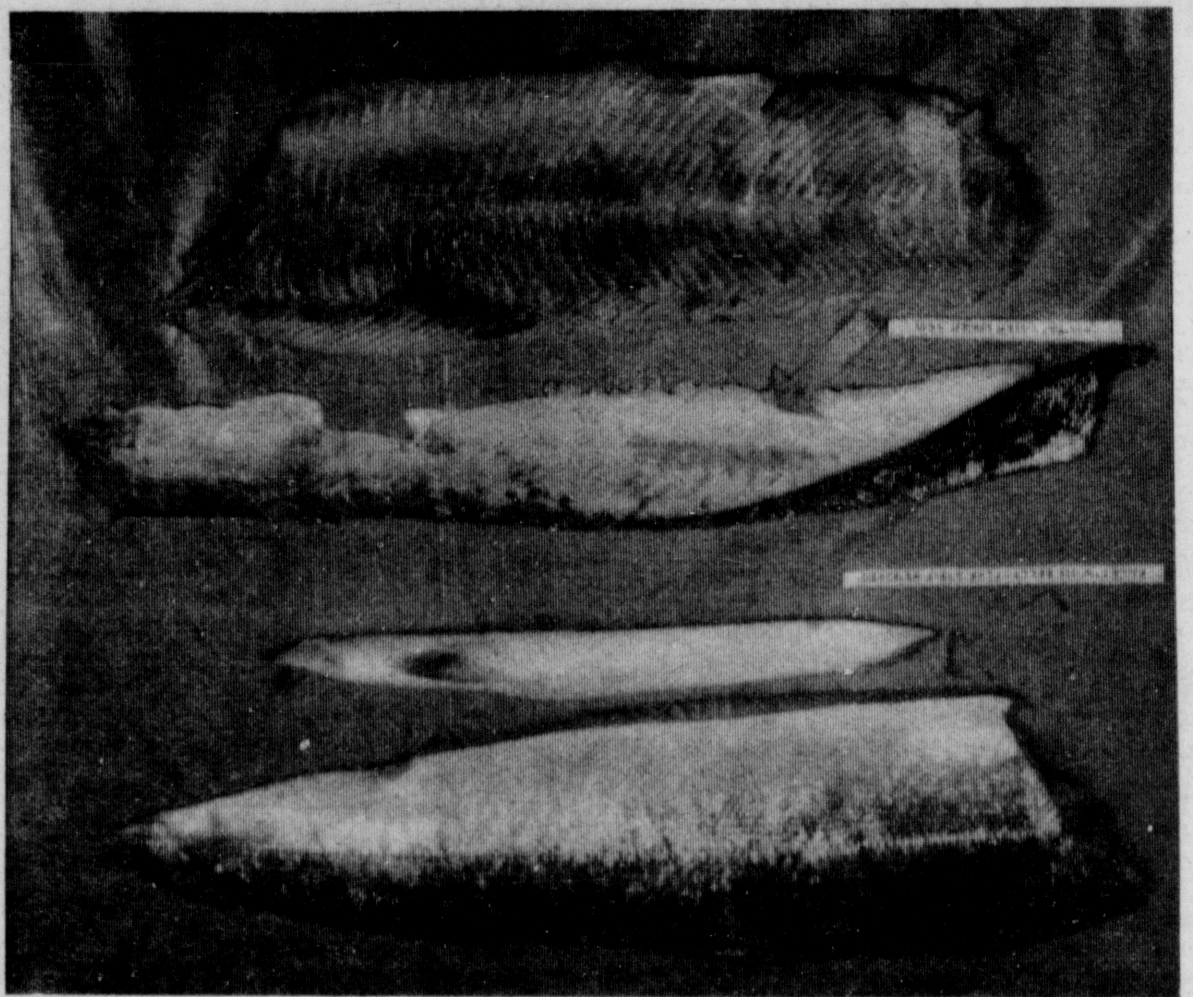

Raided Weirs

"They pulled them out with dip nets and with their bare hands. People were even raiding our collecting weirs," Anguilm reported.

One inventive fellow sewed hooks to each finger of a canvas glove. Then he waded into the stream to snag the salmon—a technique probably invented by bears that catch the salmon that way in the Northwest and Alaska.

Anguilm was asked if he thought the unruly class of salmon fishermen ever would calm down as the fish became less of an exotic novelty.

"Not as long as we have a large number of fish and a heavy crush of fishermen," he predicted.

REMOVE PESTICIDES FROM FISH — Michigan State University scientists say anglers can reduce pesticide residues in salmon and other fish by filleting, skinning and removing belly-flap tissue. Most pesticides are stored in fatty tissue along the fish's back and belly-flap area and under the skin along the lateral line on either side of the fish's body. Fillet at top of photo shows belly-flap removed. Fillet at bottom has belly-flap removed and has been skinned, eliminating pesticides stored in fat under the skin (as indicated by arrow). Filleting process leaves fatty tissues along back remaining attached to skeleton which has been discarded.

Walleye Lair Easy To Find

The most important thing in fishing walleyes is to locate the fish.

Once you do this the rest is usually easy. To locate walleye try fishing bars, reefs, shallow bays, weed beds and snags, or inlets with a good flow of water. Or look for the guy catching fish.

May, June and October are considered the best months for walleye fishing. During these months walleyes are active and generally feed in shallow water.

If you can sneak out of the house without helping with the supper dishes, or if you roll out of bed at the crack of dawn, these are the preferred periods of the day to try for walleyes.

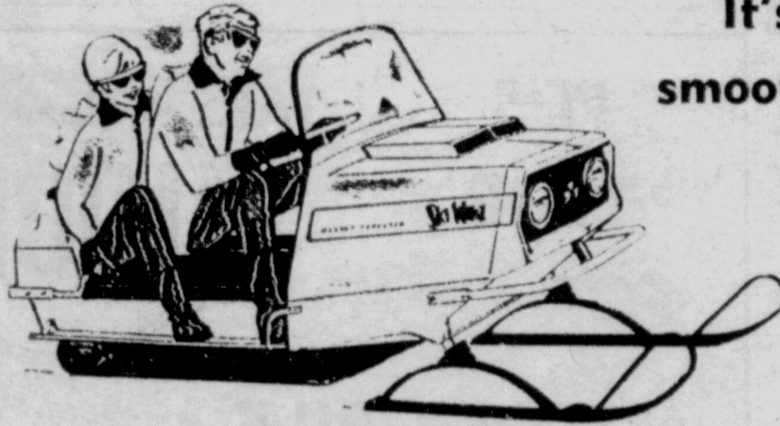

Trotting or casting artificial baits, such as jigs, deep-running plugs, spoons or spinners will usually produce walleyes early and again late in the season. Retrieve your bait slowly and keep it near the bottom.

From about the first of June on watch for mayflies or other insect hatches. If you notice a good hatch, grab your fly rod and try to fish for walleyes on the surface with poppers, streamers or hair flies.

If you have to do your walleye fishing during the hot summer months, your best chance is to troll or cast deep along bars or reefs and weed beds.

The brown trout is a member of the salmon family.

Coho Miracle Is Five Years Old

Lewis and Clark made American history discovering the Northwest Passage.

Tanner and Tody reversed the direction and made fishing history by blazing the Coho trail.

Just five years ago, Drs. Howard A. Tanner and Wayne H. Tody, Michigan conservation experts, began a Great Lakes experiment with Coho (silver salmon) transplants from the Pacific Northwest.

Fantastic is almost a feeble word to describe the resulting explosion of Coho population and Cohomaniac fishermen, primarily in Lake Michigan.

Triggers Boom

It also triggered a financial boom for dealers in fishing gear, boats, travel, food and lodging as Coho fishermen swarmed to Lake Michigan and its offshore waters and, to a lesser degree, Lake Superior.

With Chinook, whopping salmon counterpart of the Coho, now an added Great Lakes starter, Midwest fishing experts are echoing Al Jolson's famed line: "Folks, you ain't heard nothing yet."

Booms Industry

Spokesmen for 200 fishing tackle manufacturers conceded

the Coho craze in the fall of 1967 and spring of 1968 was responsible for a record $431,-191,000 industry shipment for 10 months ending May 31 this year.

As a result, the display of 1969 fish-catching products was Coho-pegged to new tackle items including reels, rods, lines, lures, landing nets, tackle boxes, and even specially tailored hooks and sinkers.

Flashed before some 1,500 buyers and dealers at a recent tackle show were such baits as the Coho-Laker Taker, Coho Tout, Coho Tailspin, Silver Tiger, Cohokie, Coho Cocktail, Coho Salamander, Coho Flasher, Sparkle Coho Jig and Coho Blue.

Special Lines

New rods and reels included Coho combinations, heavy duty silver king rods for salmon and steelheads, and an eight-foot Coho rod.

Even fishing lines are designed to snag the Coho fisherman, including a "Coho 1" braided nylon and a "Coho Special" braided dacron, not to mention a "Coho-size" tackle box and landing nets especially designed for Coho fishing.

Last fall, fishermen were bumping into each other in a vast armada of craft — and even drowning in sudden Lake Michigan squalls — to catch an estimated 100,000 Coho.

May Set Record

Michigan Department of Natural Resources predicted this fall's peak action should produce a catch of about 150,000 Cohos off the state's upper western shores.

The silver salmon will average 12-14 pounds in the the start of September in the homing areas of Frankfort and Manistee, Mich., and that the world record catch of a 31-pound Coho could be broken.

The brown pelican has a wingspread of more than six feet.

SUCCESSFUL HUNT — This lucky hunter has just finished killing a nice black bear during deer season. Last year, 180 bear were killed in the Upper Peninsula incidental to deer season. U. P. black bear were usually found in heavily wooded areas near lowlands, rivers and/or streams. Most adult bear will average out about 300 pounds.

TRANSPORTING DEER

The worst place to carry a deer on a car is over the front fender where mud and slush can cover it and where engine heat can wreck the meat. A better place is on the roof, or slung sideways across the top of the trunk. If the weather is cold enough, the best place is in the trunk where it will stay clean and dry. If you carry your deer on the outside of the car, wrap it loosely in canvas or filmy plastic to give it protection.

ELK AND MOOSE

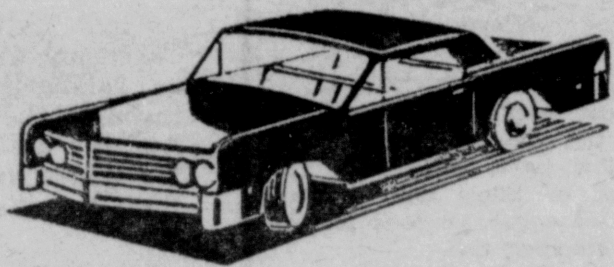

Michigan's elk herd is a popular attraction in the north-eastern Lower Peninsula. Under careful management the elk herd has increased to the point where limited, tightly controlled hunting seasons can be held in some years. Consult the Rules for Hunting. Deer hunters should be especially careful not to shoot an elk by mistake for a deer. Every year, a few moose are sighted in the Upper Peninsula. Most are seen in the eastern end of this region. There are probably not more than a total of 50 or 60 moose on Michigan's mainland but the Isle Royale herd is sizable. Moose may not be taken at any time.

Hints Show How To Bag Big Buck

Here are hints on how you can improve your chances of taking home a deer both this fall and in future seasons. Also, answers to questions hunters often ask, along with facts on deer and hunting.

Where can I hunt to better my chances of bagging a deer?

Most of the deer are taken in the northern Lower Peninsula, but most of the hunters are there too. In the U. P., there are just as many deer, but fewer hunters, so each individual has a better chance. But remember, if you hunt in the U. P., there are fewer hunters to move the deer around, so your hunting methods must change accordingly.

If you plan to camp on federal, state, or county lands while hunting, write to the Conservation Department's Publications Room and ask for a current copy of the Camp-Ground Directory. Also, ask for a County Map Information Sheet. The Department has a limited supply of excellent county maps, size 11x17 inches, and the Information Sheet tells you how to obtain these maps.

Michigan has about 7,000,000 acres of state and federal land open to public hunting and camping, and the Camp-Ground Directory tells both how these lands can be used, and the best locations. As a safety measure, report your camping location to the nearest State Police post; in case of emergency at home, they will be able to contact you.

Methods Of Hunting

Sitting — Find where you want to hunt on the day before season, then get there and get settled half an hour before daylight on opening day. Deer mainly see movements, and even if you sit in the open, they will probably not notice you until you move.

Shifting your rifle, turning your head, smoking—all are small movements, but they spook deer. Two thirds of all deer are taken the first three days, and half of these are shot the first day. On the second and third days, deer will be in heavier cover, so change your location accordingly.

Stand or sit in front of available cover, not behind it. This gives an open view for the area being watched, it breaks up your silhouette, and screens you from the rear so you can turn for action without being seen. If you get too cold, build a little fire; deer don't seem to mind wood smoke.

Stick to your runway. Don't waste time looking for a better stand. Stand facing, or sideways to the wind. Facing downwind is warmer, but you won't see the deer that get your scent; they'll be gone.

Stalking — In stalking, the hunter follows a fresh track to within rifle distance of the deer. Walk into the wind, if possible. Don't try to outrun the deer; follow slowly, and as quietly as possible. Move up to openings or tops of ridges slowly, then scan the area carefully before moving on. If you spook a deer, he will run awhile, so consider your distance from camp before going on.

Deer Drives — Station one or two hunters on the best openings or runways, then have the other hunters string out in a line through a swamp or woods, and make a clatter while walking toward the stationed hunters. Sometimes, the deer will try to sneak or bust back through the line of drivers, and this can be dangerous if everyone starts shooting.

In some camps, drivers are not allowed to carry guns. When the stationed hunters bag their deer, they go turn-about and become drivers for the other hunters.

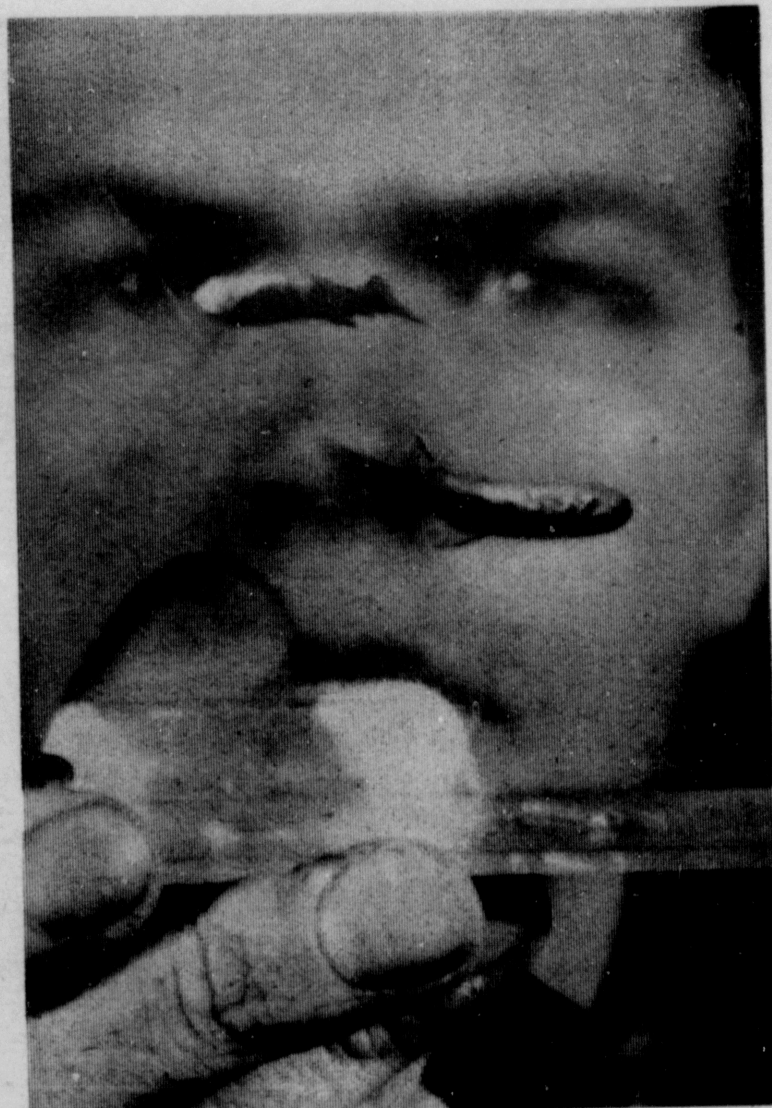

Deer Tracks: What they tell you — In deer season, one hears frequent comment on how to tell buck tracks from doe tracks. "Buck tracks toe out; doe tracks point in or run straight. Does don't drag their feet..." etc. These are some of the tales heard. But various groups of deer hunters who thought they knew have been put to the test, and they were unable to tell buck tracks from doe tracks with any consistency.

Actually, there is no difference in buck and doe tracks. At best, you can guess that very big tracks might belong to a buck because does seldom grow so large; and that the very smallest tracks are probably those of a fawn.

You can tell a deer's speed, however, from his tracks. In running, a deer's hind feet strike ahead of the front feet, and leave side by side, paired tracks. In trotting, the track is straight-line, or Indian file. In walking, the tracks will be closer together than in trotting, and a bit more zig-zag in course.

In snow that's more than an inch or two deep, a deer that's walking will drag its feet, leaving the longest scuff marks at the heel of the tracks. On soft ground the dew claw will also show on a walking tract, at the rear of the footprint.

DEAD SALMON — The lifeless bodies of two young coho float in a test tank under the examining eye of a Department of Natural Resources fish biologist. The young salmon allegedly died from a heavy dosage of DDT. The Michigan Department of Natural Resources fought long and hard to establish a ban on the use of hard pesticides in Michigan.

It's a beaut.

Smokey Says

are a menace to the public!

A HAPPY GROUSE HUNTER examines his kill with a trusty friend looking on. U. P. grouse are usually found in a wooded area, particularly if food sources are nearby. A good bird dog is a valuable asset to the grouse hunter. A dog can usually work the heavy brush where the birds are found, allowing the hunter to walk along an opening and watch for flushing birds. The ruffed grouse this hunter is holding is basically a grayish bird with a very distinguishable half-inch-wide black tail band outlined by two stripes of white.

Lakers Planted At Ford River

The U. S. Fish and Wildlife Service has planted 100,000 lake trout at the mouth of the Ford River in an effort to re-establish the lake trout in Green Bay.

"This plant is one of many to be made along the northern shore of Lake Michigan by the department," explained Asa Wright, of Marquette, Great Lakes biologist for the Department of Natural Resources.

"We're trying to spread these fish around the lake in order to rebuild a natural fish stock in Lake Michigan," he added.

Wright also told the Daily Press that a plant of 100,000 lake trout was made this summer at the mouth of Thompson Creek near Manistique.

"This Thompson plant combined with the Ford River stocking should really help in developing a lake trout fishery from Manistique to Menominee," Wright said.

Cliff Long of Escanaba, Department of Natural Resources biologist, said that he thought the federal stocking would be a big aid in the improvement of sportfishing in the Escanaba area.

"I wish they would have planted further out, but I'm very happy that our area has received such a huge plant," Long said.

The lake trout release at the mouth of the Ford River was the first in the Little Bay de Noc area.

Long also told the Press that 50,000 extra coho salmon have been planted in Haymeadow Creek near the campground.

Sportsmen; Care For Your Waders

By BOB GREGG

When a fisherman or duck hunter buys a pair of waders he makes an investment which, according to the care he takes of them, can bring him many years of satisfaction, or complete disgust within a year. In purchasing waders, a short person with large feet will usually end up with a pair of waders made for a tall person with the identical size of shoe.

Custom made waders are well worth the extra financial investment, for they will last far longer. The better fitting your waders are, the less areas there will be to buckle and chafe against each other — thereby causing holes in the material.

A great deal of the damage caused to waders is done by anglers who forget all about taking the waders out and drying them, when they arrive at home following a fishing trip. Admittedly, this drying out business is a bit of a problem. The waders should first of all be pulled inside out, this makes sure that the interior of the waders are absolutely dry. This prevents the greatest harm that can happen to waders, that is by letting the interior remain damp for days at a time causing mildew and rot.

After drying out your waders, they should be hung (boots up) in a nice dry place till you need to use them again. It is a good habit to check your waders regularly for cracks, leaks, or areas that are being chafed.

As soon as such areas are found, it is a good idea to cement a patch over the spot immediately to prevent further complications. Don't wait till you feel the ice cold water trickle down your leg, before you fix your waders.

Usually the inside seam by the knee is the first part of your waders that begins to show wear. If you see this area start to chafe, put a piece of old inner tube on the inside of the knee to give it extra wearing strength.

Remember, if you take care of your waders they will take care of you. A good pair of custom waders should last you several years, if they don't you have no one to blame but yourself.

Wolves, Coyotes, Foxes, Bobcats

Coyotes and foxes are fair game the year - around. The few wolves remaining in remote parts of the Upper Peninsula are fully protected. Don't shoot one. Bobcats may be hunted at any time in the Upper Peninsula but only during a specified late - winter open season in the Lower Peninsula.

A small sparrow has 14 vertebrae in its neck while the tall giraffe has only seven.

Rapid River Appeals To Hunters, Anglers

One of the most delightful recreation areas in the Upper Peninsula is centered by Rapid River, heart of a paradise for hunters and fishermen.

Located at the crossroads of the Peninsula at the intersection of Highways U.S. 2 and U.S. 41, Rapid River sits atop the Green Bay fishing waters at the head of Little Bay de Noc, noted for its fine coho, pike and bass fishing.

A few miles to the northeast is the famous Whitefish River, noted for its fine trout and salmon fishing. Bay de Noc, the rivers, the inland lakes and streams combine to make the Rapid River area an all-around recreation delight.

The vast reaches of the Hiawatha National Forest offer unlimited hunting for deer, bear and small game.

The Rapid River Chamber of Commerce, the merchants and all of the people of the community, welcome the tourist, the hunter and the fishermen.

At the deer hunting season in November each year thousands of nimrods make Rapid River their center of supply and entertainment. One of the features is the annual deer hunters round-up when the town turns itself inside out to show the visitors a good time. There is good food, dancing and fellowship of kindred souls.

Rapid River has, of course, a year-around appeal for everyone who likes the out-of-doors.

Year-Around Fishing

From early spring and the start of the smelt runs, through the walleye and perch season openings, and into summertime when bass and Northerns give fishermen a thrill, Rapid River has just about everything for the angler. Besides the bay fishing (it continues right through the winter months with spear- ing and hook and line fishing through the ice) there is the fine trout waters at the Hay- meadow and the upper reaches of the east and west branches of the Whitefish.

Autumn brings its challenge to the small game hunter, when ruffed grouse rumble and whirr their way through the bright- colored uplands; prairie chick- ens call from the plains; and rabbits offer additional sport through the fall and winter months. There is goose and duck hunting along the shores and marshes as a bonus.

The area has family vacation appeal. There are cottages, camps, shore parks and other attractions and facilities. Swim- ming and boating are an ever- present pleasure.

See Browsing Deer

The Stonington Shore with its rocky headlands and the old lighthouse camp and picnic grounds at the end of Penin- sula Point are points of interest for the motorist; and part way down the shore is the cool and shady welcome of Twin Springs Park.

Evening rides along the Ston- ington Peninsula roads reveal one of the thrills of the area— the sight of scores of deer that come from the woods to crop the grass of pasturelands and even mingle with the cattle of the farms.

But perhaps most appealing of all is the hearty welcome the visitor will receive from the people of Rapid River and their neighbors of the area. It's a genuine expression of true Northern Hospitality.

IT ALL STARTED back on April 17, 1968, when Cliff Long, Department of Natural Resources fish biologist, emptied a bucket of young coho salmon into Haymeadow Creek. This fall, the homing instinct of these salmon brought them swarming back to spawn, and anglers experienced the thrill of catching the popular coho. The fish being stocked in this photo came back this fall as 8-18 pound monsters.

Fishing Families Find Togetherness

Getting ready for that long-awaited family fishing trip can be half the fun in itself. There is no doubt that the family that "plays together, stays together" and family fishing is one of the most congenial of family fun activities.

Millions of people in North America have learned how to get more fun—and more fish—out of a family fishing trip by planning for it well in advance. While fishing is excellent in many areas from early spring until late fall, most families plan their outings for late spring and early summer, after the youngsters are out of school.

Knowing where to go is almost as important as knowing what to do when you get there. Almost every state and many local and area chambers of commerce or tourist associations are happy to provide information on types of accommodations that are available in their areas. Usually, attractive brochures with much descriptive information are now available from such sources.

When in doubt, families can write to the state capitol in the states where they plan to visit and get the desired information.

Sleeping Accommodations

If the family is planning to camp out on their fishing trip, they will want to know what facilities are available, what access they will have to fishing waters from their camping location, and what restrictions there might be on camping in their chosen locale.

Non-campers will want to know about sleeping accommodations, food, availability of boats, motors, baits, ice and other supplies in the area to which they are going.

One of the best sources for reliable fishing information is the retail store that sells fishing tackle. That's where a lot of fish stories get exchanged and where you can get not only the equipment and supplies you need but also some good advice on how and where to use it.

Most families operate on a budget, so they will want to know in advance what their investment will be. Most fishing camps and resorts will quote exact per-person daily rates with or without food.

Proper Clothing

Having the proper clothing for various weather situations can be most important in making the venture a happy one for the whole family. Some sort of rain gear is usually recommended for everyone in the family. Even if it doesn't rain, it affords protection from wind and from the spray that sometimes shoots up around a fast-moving boat.

Being caught in a sudden rain shower without suitable protection can spoil the fun.

Persons, especially youngsters with sensitive skin, need protection from the sun, also. Even on cool, cloudy days the sun's rays filter through and are magnified and reflected in water.

One project that most families can enjoy before setting off on a fishing trip is getting the tackle ready. Interest begins to mount as soon as you begin to clean out and restock the family's tackle boxes.

The kitchen table is a good place to operate. There will always be a few rusty hooks, some lures with tooth-marks in them (which Dad will hold up and say, "You remember that 5-pound bass I caught with this last year?"), half a candy bar, several reels that need cleaning, oiling and fresh line; a flashlight with dead batteries; several bent leaders; and a couple of cracked bobbers; some lead sinkers that are no longer usable; a rusty can-opener and a water logged copy of last year's fishing license.

Sorry About Your Buck, He's Dead!

By DEAN VOLENCE

(Editor's Note: Dean Volence, author of this article, is a Wisconsin conservation officer. What he has to say, however, pertains just as well to Michigan's present situation.)

Too bad about your buck. It wasn't necessary that he should die before the season. But that's the way it goes too much of the time.

You want to know something? You are not going to get a deer this year.

Want to know why? Because your buck is already dead. That's right. I buried him the other day.

He was a magnificent big 10-pointer. You would have been proud to have shown him to your friends. You would have had the excitement of reliving the experience of bagging this buck for years to come. His beautifully - balanced rack was something any hunter would have been proud to display in any den.

The ground was hard and dry as I dug a last resting place for your trophy. As I sat down to rest I could not help but wonder how many people knew what happened to this buck.

I stared at the two big holes through the buck's mid-section. No question, the damage was done with a big rifle. The fatal holes were low. He perhaps traveled a long distance especially since dogs, smelling the fresh blood, had pushed him until he could go no more.

I could not help but think of what a slow, agonizing death this meant to such a beautiful animal.

Largest Deer Dressed 354

The largest deer even known taken in Michigan didn't have antlers as large as two sets submitted this year to the Boone and Crockett Club Records of North American Big Game. Both of these heads, from Ray Sadler of Grand Ledge and taken in 1963, and from Paul Korhonen of Keweenaw Bay and taken in 1946, scored 176½ points.

The largest deer ever taken in Michigan weighed 354 pounds dressed and was taken by Albert H. Tippet of Flint in 1919 near Trout Creek in Ontonagon County. Under today's hunting pressures monster deer like Tippet's are unlikely, say biologists, but there still are some very large deer in Michigan forests.

You won't be alone in not getting your deer this year. No, someone else won't get theirs either.

Why? Because I already found him, too. His head and skin were in two bags thrown out alongside the road. Your heart would have skipped a couple of beats as he walked in front of you opening morning.

Then there was the spike buck killed with fine shot. The doe shot with the .22 rifle lingered for two days before death ended her agony.

How many more? It looks like you may be out of luck for some years to come. The heck of it is, your son will soon be old enough to go deer hunting with you. There is a good chance one of these deer would have been the trophy your son would have cut his teeth on.

So you know who shot the deer. You say, "I don't want to report my neighbor."

Well, if you don't want to report your neighbor, you actually can't expect that anything will ever be done about the law - breaking in your neighborhood. If you come right down to it, you aren't a much better citizen than your neighbor who shot the deer—are you?

Eyes Can Play Tricks When You're Hunting

It was opening day of deer season. Two hunters were talking in low tones when one of them heard a slight noise nearby.

Certain that he saw a coveted rack above the marsh grass over which he was looking, the older man raised his rifle. He took careful aim and was just squeezing the trigger when his companion yelled and knocked the gun away from its intended target—just as a foolish, teenage boy stepped into clear view. The "rack" was a dead tree branch the boy carried over his shoulder.

The hunter, shaken by the near tragedy, returned to camp and headed for home, still wondering how he could have been so mistaken. At his wife's suggestion he had his eyes examined by an optometrist friend and learned he had a distinct need for corrective glasses.

Not everyone is so fortunate as this hunter and this boy.

The National Safety Council estimates that in a year some 700 are killed by hunters and another 9,000 wounded by U.S. hunting enthusiasts.

A number of factors contribute to the serious problem of hunters' safety in the woods. Primary among these is horseplay and just plain carelessness, but too often overlooked as a cause is faulty vision. The most comprehensive analysis of hunting accidents ever made, conducted by the Minnesota Hunter Casualty Study, disclosed that 77 per cent of the hunters causing the accidents had defective vision.

In the study a representative of the Minnesota Optometric Association tested 74 hunters—all involved in major hunting accidents—for visual acuity, muscle balance, depth perception and color recognition. He compared the vision of these hunters with that of a control group and found that two-thirds of the negligent hunters he tested had faulty depth perception—which would make it difficult for them to tell whether another hunter was within range of their bullets.

The optometrist found that all of the victims who were accidentally shot when mistaken for game wore red clothing. But 60 per cent of the men who shot them were color-blind—and red is as drab as the fall landscape to the color-blind.

To emphasize the potential danger from this standpoint it should be noted that eight to nine per cent of all men are color-blind and have particular trouble distinguishing between red and green.

Perhaps the most frightening discovery from the Minnesota study was that most of the hunters with visual defects were not aware of it. Three out of four color-blind men never even suspected their handicap.

One said he thought he needed no visual help. His record revealed muscular imbalance, poor visual acuity, defects in perception and color recognition. His victim "happened" to be in the line of fire.

Seeing perfectly for hunting calls for the finest vision. Judging a moving target in a spilt second against a myriad of backgrounds, under all sorts of weather conditions, in a bright field or the deep woods' shade taxes eyesight to the utmost. Most important of all is sharp visual acuity. The slight blurriness can keep you from taking home the limit of birds—or that prize set of antlers. According to the Florida Optometric Association, eyesight can blur without your realizing it, especially if you are past 40.

For safety's sake—both yours and the other fellow's—here are some suggestions:

If glasses have been prescribed, wear them while you are hunting. Don't leave them at home.

If you use glasses, rub a bar of soap on the surface of the lenses, take a dry cloth and polish briskly. This provides a polished surface on which raindrops cannot remain like polka dots. Rain runs off, leaving your glasses wet but clear. This procedure also prevents steaming.

Smokey Says

Be careful with that Camp Fire!

Know your visual capacity and shortcomings. Be sure of your target before you pull the trigger.
